BETTER BUSINESS OUTLOOK

Manufacturers, Builders and Others
See Improved Industrial Conditions—More Men Go Back to Work This Week.

Milwaukee, Jan. 4.—Manufacturers, builders and business men declare that Milwaukee will see a betterment in the business and industrial conditions of this city before 1922 has reached the age of a few months. Hundreds of men who have been laid off for several months will return to their work on Tuesday. Some of the plants will be placed on a half-time basis in order to enable the entire personnel to be employed, while other shops, which have been operating on the half-time schedule, will again return to the full-day scale. An active building month has been predicted for January, and it is stated that next month a greater amount of building will be reported. Milwaukee's extensive home building program will not be held back until spring, but builders report building will take place during the entire winter months to provide work for the unemployed. John D. Bird, general manager of the Worthington Pump and Machinery company, Cudahy, states that all indications point to a better business for 1922, and that before March a decided improvement will be seen in many lines. About 40 per cent of the full strength employed at the plant are now at work, stated Mr. Bird. Men will be added to the force as soon as conditions warrant it, he explained. According to Howard Landgraf, assistant advertising manager of the Chain Belt company, a brighter year is anticipated, and it is believed that men will be added to the forces in a short time. A great increase in production has been reported by the Federal Rubber company, states B. H. Pratt, general manager. A large number of men who were laid off during the last month will be called to work this week, but no new men will be put to work until their list of regular employees has been filled, he declared. At the Milwaukee railroad shops 3,000 men who were recently laid off will return to work this week. The half-time basis will be introduced until conditions better. J. A. Anderson, superintendent of motive power, pointed out that the half-time schedule is to the best interests of all employees.

Tuberculosis Decreasing.
Madison, Jan. 4.—The state board of health in a statement says that census bureau figures credit Wisconsin with a slight increase in tuberculosis deaths for 1920, the year's mortality of 2,267 being 65 in excess of 1919. This is said to be a marked falling off from other years, according to the report. The trend of the tuberculosis death rate is said by the board to be distinctly downward. The trend in Wisconsin and other states of the death rate from organic heart diseases is said to be upward, along with that of cancer.

Convictions are said to have been obtained in a number of instances, while settlements were reached in other cases.
