The comet has given us the slip.
Blame it to the clouds.And to think we waited seventy-five years to get a glimpse of it!It is a question whether the comet is chasing his tail or the tail his comet.

The exercises to be held next Sunday afternoon at the Calumet M. E. church in honor of the memory of the late King Edward will be open to the public and not confined to former subjects of Britain's dead monarch. The late king was held in the highest esteem the world over. He was a great power for good, a champion of peace, and one of America's best friends. He was a man of marked executive ability, prominent in all world movements and local native born Americans will join with their English brethren in paying tribute to his life and deeds.

Last week of May. Everybody will welcome June for a change.

How will coming generations get their physical exercise in outdoor recreations? The motor-cycle has played hob with the bicycle, and the power boat has the sailing boat and the earthen on the run. A tiny motor now pushes the light Indian canoe over the shallow lakes and streams, and for some the paddle is too strenuous or too slow. Shall we next see the pedestrian truck a motor in his pocket and get over the ground without the labor of moving his feet?

What's the use? This is the query advanced by the few faithful business men who called at the town hall yesterday afternoon to attend a meeting of the Calumet Business Men's association and found an insufficient number present to transact any business. And who can blame them for getting disgusted? They have tried at various times to revive the association, which has never been much more than a name, and have not been accorded that support and co-operation necessary to make an organization of the kind of some value to the community. The get-together spirit for the mutual benefit and protection of business interests is lacking and the faculty of making further efforts to create such sentiment is apparent.

An advertisement in a weekly magazine appears to the people of the United States to write to the Contributing Editor of the Outlook and tell him whether or not they like the tariff, want immediate revision, favor the leadership of Cannon and Aldrich or of Dilliver and Mardock, want a parcels post, postal savings, banks, reciprocity with Canada and various other matters, including whether or not they like Mr. Taft's administration. But why tell Mr. Roosevelt? Great leaders of the people are supposed to have minds of their own, by the aid of which they can determine the wisdom or unwisdom of policies, and by which they can sense not only what is the surface opinion of the people, but what is their underlying purpose. Is Mr. Roosevelt incapable of these functions of leadership? Must he seek a postal card referendum for instructions how to act? Somebody appears to have a small conception of a great man's ability.

There is no need to be apprehensive that Mr. Osborn's interests will suffer because of over-confidence, as some of Mr. Osborn's newspaper friends seem to fear. Mr. Osborn is not the sort of man who lies down on a fight, any more than he has laid down on any job he has ever tackled. He will push his campaign through to the end, vigorously and manfully. Mr. Osborn is not a politician. He knows that the price of success in politics, as in business, is sustained and vigorous effort. However much he may believe things are coming his way, Mr. Osborn will not permit himself to be lulled by attractive word pictures of the victory in September to slacken him in an aggressive, earnest and always effective campaign, in which he will deal with the voters fully and frankly on every issue that properly figures in the discussion. No, friends, there is no need to fear the smug effects of over-confidence in the Osborn camp. If Mr. Osborn is assured of a lead pipe crouch on the governorship tomorrow, the victory decisive as it could possibly be made. That's the kind of a man he is.—Mining Journal.

Apparently the astronomers have a good deal to learn about Halley's comet. However, one thing which they have protested from the first has been verified, and that is the harmlessness of the celestial wanderer. Fr. Algue, the noted astronomer in charge of the observatory at Manilla, makes the most positive assertions based on exhaustive observations followed under favorable conditions. He reports that no solid matter was revealed.

Presumably these observations will be confirmed from other places where the conditions were similarly favorable. They come too late, however, to affect the people who have suffered from the delusion that the comet would bump the world and send it spinning—and its denizens with it—off into space. Deaths have been reported on account of the comet; some people have gone mad; others have experienced milder forms of distress. No doubt before another three-quarters of a century comes around greater confidence will be felt in the assurance of the astronomers. Much may be made of the reassuring results of the Philippines observations. Meantime we can look forward to a long and lively discussion of the question of what became of the comet's tail.

It must be a source of considerable satisfaction and comfort to the president in the midst of his daily anxieties and perplexities—for he frankly confesses they are more numerous than he anticipated—to be assured, as he is from time to time, that whenever he may find it possible to break away from the executive office, there are hundreds of places and thousands of people in all other parts of the country, near and remote, who will be only too glad to see him, to welcome him, to make him feel that it is fine to be president after all.

Particularly satisfying and comforting must it be to him to learn that the South, almost beyond other parts of the Union, is desirous of extending to him warm-hearted hospitality. Down in Georgia, as the Savannah Press tells us, the people are impatient for the time when President Taft may feel free to enter upon another series of excursions, "for," says that newspaper, "he has done more traveling in the South than all the other presidents since the civil war." And it adds: "The people of the South are willing, even anxious for this recognition. . . . The truth of the matter is that the president has made very many personal friends in the South. . . . After the cordial way in which he has been treated in the South, we should like to see southern representatives examining his traveling expenses with a microscope and drawing a line between the travel which is already done and that which he may hereafter do."

It is worth almost more than the $25,000 a year that it costs the country to provide for the president's traveling expenses to find the Savannah Times and other southern newspapers on the liberal side of the question.

Historic Throne Chair of England

London, England, May 24.—The coronation of a king is attended by many historic customs which date back to the medieval times, certain customs and traditions having been brought into the twentieth century from the first monarch who ruled over England.

One of the most interesting historic ceremonies is in connection with the throne chair, on which every English monarch has sat during the coronation ceremonies. This chair, so legend tells us, contains the stone over which Christ prayed in the Garden of Gethsemane just before the crucifixion.

There is but one other throne chair in Europe dating back to the time of Christ. This is the one on which rulers of Russia sit, and this is said to contain wood from the cross on which Christ was crucified.

"He has done more traveling in the South than all the other presidents since the civil war." And it adds: "The people of the South are willing, even anxious for this recognition. . . .
