This is to certify that Dr. Behrens treated me in February, '04, for a very bad case of nervousness. Where others have failed to give me relief he cured me. I was at the time of calling on him, down and sleep was impossible. My husband had lost sleep at night for months, now all can rest in perfect ease. He also treated my mother at the same time for a severe headache and neuralgia. Dr. Behrens gave her instant relief while talking to her over the phone.

down pains are a symptom of the most serious trouble which can attack a woman, viz: falling of the womb. With this, generally, come irregular, painful, scanty or profuse periods, wasteful, weakening drains, dreadful backache, headache, nervousness, dizziness, irritability, tired feeling, inability to walk, loss of appetite, color and beauty. The cure is

DOZEN WHITE DOVES.

Feature Caused Great Cheering and President Smiled.

LYNCHING IS SCORED

Reference to the "Rebel Yell" Made by Arkansas Executive Came Near Resulting in Practical Demonstration.

Little Rock, Oct. 26.—When the thirteen Confederate and same number of Union soldiers who acted as the president's escort met his each was given a hearty handshake and verbal greeting. He remarked: "Gentlemen, it does me good to see the blue and the gray riding together." He called each veteran "comrade."

As the party entered the City park under an arch bearing the inscription, "Little Rock Greets You," twelve white doves were liberated from the apex of the arch, directly over the president's carriage. This feature caused great cheering and the president smiled his appreciation.

The exercises at the City park opened promptly at 11:30 a. m. Governor Davis delivered an address of welcome, in which he drew a word picture of the resources of Arkansas, touched lightly upon the race question and assured the president that the people of Arkansas were glad he had come among them. The governor's tribute to southern women was applauded by the president. When reference was made by Governor Davis to the famous "rebel yell," the proceedings were interrupted by a manifest desire on the part of many in the crowd to give a semblance of this yell. The president seemed pleased with the effort.

United States District Judge Trierer followed in an address of welcome on behalf of the city of Little Rock. He declared that the people of this state, regardless of political opinions, were proud to honor President Roosevelt.

The president's opening words: "Fellow Americans," produced a renewal of the demonstration of welcome occurring as he was presented. His utterances were followed closely by the large audience and at intervals he had to desist while his hearers gave vent to their approbation of his remarks. When he declared that the menace and reproach of lynch law should be driven out of the United States, there was much earnest cheering. A large portion of the president's audience was composed of negroes and the chief executive's words pertaining to lynching were apparently deeply impressive upon them. The president's declaration that "if a president is worth his salt, he's the president of the whole country," was given so earnestly that it speedily drew forth plaudits from the assembled thousands.

The exercises in the park were brought to a close at 12:30 p. m. and the presidential party was then escorted through streets densely packed with cheering men, women and children to the Arkansas Consistory, where the luncheon was given. One hundred representative men of the state sat at the tables and several hundred others occupied balcony seats overlooking the scene. At President Roosevelt's right sat Lieutenant Governor Lee, United States Senators Berry and Clark, and General Powell Clayton, formerly United States ambassador to Mexico, were among those occupying seats of honor. Judge Rose of this city was presented by the toastmaster, President Rogers of the Board of Trade, to deliver the opening address on "The President of the United States."

In his address Judge Rose said that President Roosevelt had proved himself the president of no political party, but the president of every man, woman and child under the protection of the American flag. The president himself led in the applause which greeted the remark and throughout Judge Rose's address he gave undivided attention, frequently showing his approval of the sentiments uttered.

The president was given a great ovation as he arose to respond. As he stepped onto the curtain back of where he was stationed ascended and a tableau was presented. Twenty-five boys, ranging in age from eight to twelve years, each attired in a sailor suit, formed a group at once attractive and impressive. The spectacle won the president's heart and he gave unmistakable signs of his pleasure. He arose and said that he guessed all his auditors knew how he felt about the navy of the United States. "The navy of our country," he said, "was the United States' 'big stick' which would never be used against the weak unless the weak put themselves in a position when, like a bad child, chastisement was necessary." He added that the "big stick" would be kept in such condition that the necessity for its use against the strong would never arise.

Following this, Lieutenant Governor John P. Lee responded to the toast, "The State of Arkansas." He gave the president an idea of the state's great resources and, closed with an eloquent assurance that the welcome to the nation's chief executive was heartfelt.

Hon. Morris M. Cohen responded to the toast, "The Commercial and Associate Interests of the City of Little Rock," and in concluding he proposed a toast to the president of the United States, which was drunk standing.

At 3:30 the presidential party began the trip to the Rock Island railroad station along a route which was lined with people. The special train left for Memphis promptly at 4 p. m.
