CHOICE SELECTIONS

When from my weary fingers fall away...

The afternoon, when from my weary fingers fall away...

Dear hearts, the time for tears was on that day...

When first my eyes unsealed, I mark and weep...

When all before me stretched the weary way...

O'er which, however weak, my weary feet must go...

Say not, because death holds me "She was good"...

Praise her the way in which my feet have trod...

I've sinned my sins, but he'll understand...

I answer for them only to my God; Heep not, my weaver, heaven's my grave...

The offering seems so useless and so poor!

Give to the living hearts that mourn and grieve...

Who have so much before them to endure...

The way has been so long and so long!

My strained eyes sought for the far-off end;

And I have longed for death—as one who yearns...

For sight of some dear, long-expected friend!

And when death comes, all writhes that I have known...

Will seem but as a tale that's told; For I shall stand before the Father's throne...

And all the glories of His realm behold!
