Among the most prominent, however, are the Kohns and Komers of Yokohoma, who keep curio shops all over Japan and China.

The Jews of Nagasaki have founded a benevolent society, which has a good many members. They possess a fine synagogue, with three scrolls of the law. They number about 122 souls. It is the only city in Japan that has a rabbi, schochet, monel, etc. Among the prominent families is S. D. Lesner, who has a well supplied general store. Including Jews of all classes, there are about sixty families in all in Nagasaki.

I should judge that there are about 200 Jewish families in the Japanese Empire. It must be added that the Japanese are not unfriendly to the Jews, and in some Japanese servants have been long employed. For instance, S. D. Lesner's amah (maidrvant) has been with the family about twelve years.

As to native Jews, I do not believe that there are any, with the exception of one family, who are half-breeds. It seems that years ago a certain German Israelite came to Nagasaki and opened a hotel. Later he became very wealthy, and through the persussion of a well-known co-religionist, legally married his Japanese maidservant, who, with the four children. embraced Judaism. His two sons were instructed in their religion after their father's death, and do not fail to say Kaddish (prayer for the dead) and pray twice daily. The mother keeps the Sabbath holy and contributed a liberal sum to the synagogue building and purchased a new scroll

There is every reason to anticipate an increase in the number of Jews in Japan, with the magnificent possibilities for trade and advancement in its alert civilization.

Chicago School Children Won't Be Allowed to See It.

"If I had my way I'd cover up Venus and Apollo and the Gladiators and all the nude French pictures when the school children visited the art institute," said Thomas Brennan of the Chicago school board the other day.

Mr. Brennan defeated acceptance of an invitation for the school children to visit the institute every Saturday. "There are pictures and statues over

Mexico knows good citizens when she sees them, and she is determined to have the proposed Boer colony established in the state of Chihuahua, says the Indianapolis Journal. The government has advanced $50,000 out of the national treasury with which to make a part payment on an immense tract and will allow the Boers twenty-five years in which to repay the loan. Several banks in the City of Mexico have also advanced large sums. The Boers will not be obliged to pay taxes and will be exempted from military service. Mexico wants these sturdy farmers and will probably get them.
