BOASTING OF WEATHER.

Taking advantage of the brief breathing spell between the unpeppable oppressiveness of the Missouri summer and dreary months of bitter winter, soon to come, the Kansas City Star chortles with considerable satisfaction as follows:

"Fall weather in Missouri and Kansas can't be excelled. Beginning each year some time in September and running usually past November, this favored region gets the finest article of weather manufacturer, the kind today is made of. There are no goods in the weather line anywhere that can touch it, very little that can equal it. For climate, give the connoisseur in weather Missouri and Kansas in the autumn. It's the best brand of weather the world over."

While the Star displays a lamentable lack of knowledge of climatic conditions in near-by states, we can hardly censure it for drifting into a boastful mood when the occasion appears opportune. Still, it puts itself in a somewhat ludicrous position when it makes such sweeping, unsupported statements as "There are no goods in the weather line that can touch it," alluding to the Missouri-Kansas variety of fall weather. Evidently, the Star has in mind a comparison with California and some other states that are wont to take special pride in their weather, and has never sampled our Oklahoma goods.

We do not question at all that Missouri and Kansas would rank well up in the list in a fall weather contest. In fact, we cheerfully concede that they produce an exceptionally fine article but this is far from saying that they come within a mile of Oklahoma. The truth of the matter is that the Oklahoma brand is decidedly superior to any other on the market, a fact that must be recognized by all competent authorities.

Moreover, the Oklahoma variety not only grades A-1 in quality but also in quantity it holds the world record. It could be established by statistics that we grow more first class fall weather per square mile in this state than can be found in any other country on earth. In fact, so prolific is our production of this crop that we are not able to consume more than a half of it during the fall months, but we accumulate such stores of it that we have to keep on using it nearly all winter. Except for a very few days during the winter, it lasts us till well into spring. While bleak Missouri and Kansas are feeding on beastly blizzards, we continue to feast on the dainties of our delightful fall days.

We are not saying this in a boastful spirit, but merely to correct any wrong conclusions that might have been drawn from the Star's remarks. If we were disposed to boast, we certainly would observe what is manifestly as true as the gospel itself that on this proposition of weather in general, Oklahoma holds the highest batting average in the Union. It is true that for a few weeks in the summer we sizzle more or less but this merely adds to the variety which is the spice of life, giving relief from the monotony which is the bane of existence in such unfortunate countries as California. Even the discomforts of our sizzling days are not to be compared with what the folks in Missouri are going through at the same time, and for the rest of the year we revel in weather luxuries that are unknown in other climes.

A NEW HIGH STANDARD.

"I do not exaggerate when I say that not since our people through their representatives, wrote the great progressive constitution of the state of Oklahoma, has the Democracy of this state been charged with greater responsibilities. The gigantic housecleaning so happily begun by the Democratic party at our national capital must be completed. We must hold up the hands of our great president, Woodrow Wilson, who has set a new high standard of efficiency and of appreciation of the rights of the common citizen to enjoy the legitimate fruit of his own industry in peace and security.

"It is our duty, therefore, to see that the grand army of the Democracy is supplemented and strengthened by the Democratic control of Oklahoma. Party policies can not be carried out except by party solidarity, party organization, party harmony and party unity."

"Let us lay aside the excitement and the friction which has disturbed to a greater or lesser degree members of our party in making the nominations, and stand firmly together for the successful election of our nominees into whose hands we must entrust the enactment and administration of Democratic policies."

"Let us take stock, and enumerate some of the Democratic accomplishments which justify us in appealing to the people for their support in order that we may justify ourselves in asking their continued support and confidence."

"For the first time in over half a century the progressive Democracy has control of the United States government, and since March, 1913, the Democratic party with strenuous zeal and untiring diligence has fulfilled one pledge after another, and done more in the way of constructive legislation than the most sanguine friend of Democracy could have hoped for."—Senator R. L. Owen.

JOHN FIELDS' ROMANCE.

John Fields, the Republican candidate for governor, would make better headway among intelligent people if he would quit his demagoguery.

According to a Republican paper published at Stillwater, where Fields made a speech, the Republican candidate for governor is quoted as saying: The speaker (John Fields) told of a Democrat in Stephens county who wrote him and told him that he was inclined to vote for him, and asked if he would be legally liable if he did. "You laugh at this statement," said Fields, "you honest Democrats of Payne county have no idea of the conditions that exist in southern Oklahoma," and then Fields went on to paint in lurid letters about the ignorance and depravity of the farmers of the southern part of the state. He declares that three-fourths of the farmers in the southern part of the state were tenants and had been taught that the Democratic party was an oath bound organization.

When Fields reached the southern part of the state he had equally fearful tales to tell about the Democrats in the northern half. In the southern part of the state, Fields insisted that he believed in all of the negro laws the Democrats had put on the statute books, but John isn't talking that way when he gets into a county like Kingfisher or Logan, where there is a large negro population and where the grand father clause, owing to intimidation of the Republican federal court officials, has never been enforced.—Muskegon Times-Democrat.

STOLEN SMILE'S TWO.

The Only One Possible.

Pat had an argument with his wife's mother over domestic affairs, and the conversation became so heated that Pat was haled into court on a charge of disturbing the quiet of the county.

"It pains me to think," said the magistrate in reprimanding Pat, "that you should say an unkind word to your mother-in-law! I know a man who never disagreed with his mother-in-law in word, thought or deed! Never did he speak to her unkindly! Never did he—"

"Begin!" yer honor's pardon," suddenly interrupted Pat, "might I be askin' a question?"

"Certainly," responded the obliging magistrate. "What would you like to know?"

"Shure, yer honor," smiled Pat, "an' it's meself that would be likin' to know if the name of the gentleman yer referred to was Mr. A. J. Philadelphia Telegraph.

EXPRESS PACKETTES.

Thursday the 'Day.

No more the distant noise I hear,
 Because it's drawing very near.
 The big parade I boast with zest,
 And when it's o'er you'll get a rest.

And they do say, that just every-body is going to be in the big parade.

The football boys have made a brilliant start and here's hoping that they keep the pace.

St Simp says he always notices that the less he wears a pair of shoes the longer they last.

But Von Kluck has been "cut off" so often that he has probably become accustomed to it by this time.

Moreover, it is reasonably certain that the great powers are not going to be quite so great after it is over.

Another sign that the melancholy days have come, is the fact that we no longer seek the shady side of the street.

To the war correspondents the worst of it is that after all the hardships they go through nobody believes their tales.

Getting right down to bed-rock principles, it is doubtful whether any institution is more democratic than pun-kin pie.

With slightly more wisdom than his friend, St Simp, Jim Henniker confides to us the information that he notices it is always hotter in the summer than it is in the country.

Dispatches bring the news that the czar has "gone to the front." However, it is not to be inferred that he is standing right up in the face of the enemy's fire and therefore we needn't worry about it.

JUST A THOUGHT

Ere the Day is Gone.

Deeds.

Deeds are greater than words. Deeds have such a life, mute but undeniable, and grow as living trees and fruit trees do; they people the vacuity of Time and make it green and worthy.—Carlyle.

"Cute."

The word "cute," which is a shortened form of acute, is not classical English, and it is not to be wondered at that you failed to find it in the dictionaries you consulted. It is a colloquial Americanism and might almost be classed as slang. It has two meanings. In the first place it means clever, especially in looking out for one's own advantage in petty ways, shrewd, smart, a "cute trick." It also means small and pretty, attractive, as "a cute baby," "a cute little watch."

MOTHER OF SCHOOL GIRL

Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Her Daughter's Health.

Plover, Iowa.—"From a small child my 13 year old daughter had female weakness. I spoke to three doctors about it and they did not help her any. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had been of great benefit to me, so I decided to have her give it a trial. She has taken five bottles of the Vegetable Compound according to directions on the bottle and she is cured of this trouble. She was all run down when she started taking the Compound and her periods did not come right. She was so poorly and weak that I often had to help her dress herself, but now she is regular and is growing strong and healthy."—Mrs. MARTIN HELVIG, Plover, Iowa.

Many of such letters expressing gratitude for the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has accomplished are constantly being received, proving the reliability of this grand old remedy.

If you are ill do not drag along and continue to suffer day in and day out but at once take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a woman's remedy for woman's ills.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

GET READY FOR PARADE

If nobody gives you a personal invitation to enter the Trades Parade, don't feel slighted, but just get in anyway. That's what the ladies want you to do. The committees haven't time to see everybody and they don't want anybody to wait for an invitation. Another thing, you don't have to "dollar up" your auto, buggy, carriage or pony to enter. It is expected that there will be many vehicles of all kinds in the parade and while decorations are desirable, they are not absolutely necessary. The big parade will be staged on October 8 and all entries should be made at once. Phone any member of the committee under whose department you desire to enter.

Following is a list of the committees appointed in the various departments: The Oklahoma College for Women, Misses Woodring, Rule, Emerson, Weir and Mrs. Maddox.

There are many times when one man questions another's actions and motives. Men act differently under different circumstances. The question is, what would you do right now if you had a severe cold? Could you do better than to take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy? It is highly recommended by people who have used it for years and know its value. Mrs. O. E. Sargent, Peru, Ind., says, "Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is worth its weight in gold and I take pleasure in recommending it." For sale by all dealers.—Adv.

Children's eyes often show considerable difference in strength. It is imperative therefore, that they be fitted singly, and each given the full proper correction, otherwise more harm than good will result.

Our methods leave us entirely independent of what the little ones see or think they see, hence our unending success in correcting children. A child's success and happiness for life may depend on the FIRST PAIR OF GLASSES.
