

MIDLAND TRAIL BILL UP TO THE GOVERNOR

PASSES HOUSE BY VERY LARGE MAJORITY.

Now Awaits Signature of Chief Executive to Become Immediately Effective—Carries Appropriation of Fifty Thousand Dollars—Bulk to Be Spent On Eastern End.

The lower house last Friday passed the Midland trail appropriation bill after a long discussion. The vote was thirty-six to three. The bill carries an appropriation of fifty thousand dollars, thirty-five thousand of which is to be expended on the eastern end of the route and fifteen thousand to be used in Box Elder county between Snowville and the Nevada boundary.

Smith of Kane, chairman of the committee on highways and bridges, made an earnest plea for the bill. He was for all kinds of good roads, and declared that the road question was the most important before the country today. He was for attracting the automobile tourist to this state "and fence him as much as we can, just as Colorado is doing."

Hendon of Uintah, chairman of the appropriations committee of the house, opposed the bill, on the ground that the state could not afford the appropriation and for the further reason that so small a sum as fifty thousand dollars would be equivalent to wasting money, for nothing of material or permanent account could be done with it, he said.

Van Wagoner of Wasatch also opposed the bill. He was guilty of a slip of the tongue when he said that "Utah" already has more people than it can take care of, and didn't need any more. The slip brought upon him no end of rebuke, for everybody who spoke afterwards took occasion to refute the statement that Utah already had too many people. Southwick of Utah said his county alone had undeveloped areas and resources to take care of a population as large as the entire population of the state.

Henrie of Garfield, who has been given the name of "watchdog of the treasury," supported the bill, because, he said, he thought the bill only the beginning of a system of roads that was undoubtedly the crying need of Utah. He was confident that his own county would soon be chosen for road building activity in conjunction with a great north and south system.

Welling of Box Elder pledged his county to duplicate the money appropriated by the state. He declared that Utah had raised a barrier on its eastern boundary and stood there with a sword threatening those who sought to enter, with the result that they went either to the south or to the north of the state.

W. J. Elwood of Carbon county favored the measure, saying that the people of Carbon and Grand counties stood ready to do their full share towards completing the road and calling attention to the immediate need for action in order to procure funds from the National Association of Automobile Manufacturers, which promised to spend at least ten million dollars on the transcontinental road.

Mabe of Davis said the last census showed that Utah was one of the very few states that showed little satisfactory progress. It was time to wake up, he said. Reynolds of Utah, Hammond of Grand, Jones of Juab, Durham of Beaver, Cardon of Cache and others spoke in favor of the bill.

The bill passed the senate some two weeks ago.

HILL NOW AWAITS THE GOVERNOR'S SIGNATURE

The bill appropriating fifty thousand dollars for the improvement of the road through the state from the Colorado to the Nevada line, along the proposed route of the Midland trail, was signed by the president of the senate and the speaker of the house Tuesday, and now goes to the governor. The bill carries an emergency clause and the money will be available as soon as the governor affixes his signature to the bill.

WHY THE STREETS SHOULD ALWAYS BE KEPT CLEAN

Treat the Town as We Would Our Own Bodies.

The demand for good street cleaning methods is usually predicated upon the supposed menace to health which exists where such methods are lacking. While in the dirt there are to be found the germs of about every known disease, nature has made ample provision for the resistance of the attack which these germs make upon the delicate membranes upon which they are caught when spread by the wind, and because people are not sickly when lax conditions of cleaning exist they are too liable to be satisfied with poor methods. It is better to have clean streets because we want to be clean, just as it is well to have a clean body on account of the refreshing feeling and elevating mental condition. Surroundings have so much to do with the formation of character and habits that the children at least are entitled to the good bringing up that cleanly conditions compel, and the less fortunate citizen who uses the street for recreation is entitled to the best possible service. The streets, after all, are but the hallways of the great municipal house, and municipal householders should find pleasure in keeping them as does the competent housewife.—American City.
