

Tell Them!

MR. CONTRACTOR, some folks right here in town may be delaying action because, they say, "lumber is too high now." When you hear such comments you should give them the real facts.

Lumber costs more now than it did before the World War, and if there is anything in the promise of future demand in this country and Europe, it may easily be a good deal higher in years to come, but let's see just how high lumber really is, as compared with other important commodities.

Government report, published the latter part of 1918, showed these increases in commodity prices since 1913, prior to the war:

	Advance
Farm Products	136 per cent
Food	99 " "
Clothing	151 " "
Metals and Metal Products.....	83 " "
Lumber and Building Material ...	58 " "

Instead of being high, the cost of lumber and building materials, as compared with other commodities is amazingly low. Tell them about it.
