

REARING THE CHICKS.

Importance of Cleanliness in the Poultry Yard.

Perfect cleanliness is of the highest importance in the poultry yard and house during the entire year, but is especially necessary in the sultry summer months, when every detail should be carefully attended to which may be of any possible benefit to the growth and development of the young stock. Fowls which have the very best of food and care in other respects will not thrive when confined in unclean and ill ventilated houses and pens, writes W. H. Works in American Poultry Journal. Cleanliness is highly necessary in the rearing of young chicks, no matter whether they are intended for exhibition stock, for breeders or for the market.

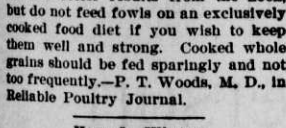

By cleanliness is not meant the use of a large quantity of disinfectants which may give the appearance of cleanliness, although these are undoubtedly good to use in connection with the care of the poultry quarters. Cleanliness is of such great account in the summer that in many cases it may mean the saving of the life of a chick as well as the health and growth, for cleanliness is the foe of vermin, and vermin is the cause of a majority of the poultry losses and diseases.

The houses for the young stock should be dry and well ventilated, and the chicks should be kept from crowding and taught to go on the roosts as soon as possible, so that there will be no danger of deformed breastbones caused by overcrowding. The brood coops and brooders should receive much of the poultryman's attention during the hot season, and the little chicks should have clean, dry straw on the floors of their coops and also plenty of fresh air and shade.

Time is one of the best things to use in the houses, either in the form of whitewash or sprinkled about the floor as a powder. Carbolic acid is also a good disinfectant, and kerosene should be used in the fight against lice and mites. The chicks need to be dusted with insect powder and their dusting places sprinkled with it. The yards should be dug up often and disinfected with lime and carbolic acid, so that the ground will not become old and full of disease germs.

poultry show. Wyandottes are great favorites in the middle and eastern states, and large numbers are found on successful farms. They are prolific egg producers.

Cooking Food For Fowls.

Cooking the food destroys the live cells and does not add anything to the food except bulk and renders the starch more easily digestible. The cooking is chiefly of service in adding variety to the food and in destroying any undesirable germs which may be present in meat food. Cooked food fed to fowls two or three times a week will afford a desirable variety to the ration and help toward better results from the flock, but do not feed fowls on an exclusively cooked food diet if you wish to keep them well and strong. Cooked whole grains should be fed sparingly and not too frequently.—P. T. Woods, M. D., in Reliable Poultry Journal.

Hens in Winter.

The flock needs an abundance of fresh air and as much liberty as can be given. With a small flock it is possible to shovel away a few feet of snow around the henhouse door, letting the fowls get outside for awhile every day. Leave the door open during the middle of the day and let them go and come as they please. When there is no snow on the ground allow the door to remain open from 10 o'clock in the morning until sundown. Don't coddle your hens, for a weak and debilitated flock will never be able to stand the strain of long continued egg laying.—Suburban Life.

Incubator Chicks Under Hens.

A hen to which incubator chicks are to be given should be free from lice and in another nest where other hens cannot disturb her. In the evening two or three chicks at least thirty-six hours old may be placed under her from behind, care being taken not to excite her lest she stop on them. At least one chick of each color should be given her, for hens are apt to kill chicks of another breed, color or size than those they have already adopted. The following morning she may be expected to mother as many as are given her.—Bulletin Connecticut Station.

Keep Poultry Houses Clean.

Cleanliness is one of the chief requisites of success, so the houses, nests and yards should be cleaned frequently, the houses whitewashed and insect powder used freely. Clean out the droppings every day, oil the roosts frequently and provide clean material for the nests every two weeks. If this is done there will be no trouble from lice, but if it is allowed to accumulate the mites will multiply rapidly and cause no end of trouble.—American Agriculturist.

Feather Pulling.

One of the most satisfactory ways of treating feather pulling, says Reliable Poultry Journal, is to rub a little extract of aloes on the feathers of the bird about the portion that has been picked at. After the feather pullers have had a good taste of the feathers doctored with aloes they are not likely to give you any further trouble.

GRAIN FOR CHICKS.

Feed Millet Seed Sparingly—Oats Should Be Halted.

We noticed a short time ago in one of our exchanges a very pertinent expression, says American Fancier. It was: "A grain of millet seed is better than a quart." The small seed induce the hen to scratch for them.

This statement is true. We witnessed the dire disaster of the utter destruction of many hundreds of young chicks in a brooder house through the feeding of too much millet seed. Millet seed should be fed as extra or dessert, just a little now and then to coax the hens along and to induce them to scratch in the litter for it—just a few seeds in the grain mixture for the little chicks, not much, just about a tablespoonful to a quart of mixture. This will be of benefit where too much will destroy their lives. It is too oily, too rich. Its tendency is to swell up and clog the bowels. This is why it proves so destructive to both old and young fowls when fed too liberally.

Kaffir corn is recommended for young chicks. So is pearl barley. Both are good. Neither of these, however, should be fed whole. They should always be cracked into two or more pieces before they are fed to any extent either to young chicks, hens or pigeons. Kaffir corn that is thoroughly well dried is almost as hard as a bullet and just as easy of reduction in the crop of the poultry. For these reasons it should be cracked or broken open before being fed. A little of this, like the millet, may be fed to grown poultry or pigeons, but not young squabs or chicks.

We often recommend hulled oats for poultry of all kinds. This is to avoid the feeding of the husks or hulls of the oats. Where you cannot obtain the hulled oats get them clipped. This is oats passed through machinery and the greater part of the hull trimmed therefrom. This reduces the consumption of the husks. It is in its natural state more than one-half husk. When fed to poultry in its natural state it must grind up and consume one pint of straw to every quart of oats that is fed to them. The straw or husk or hull of the oats has no food value whatever. For this reason it is a waste of time and labor in the life of the hen to compel her to grind up the hull of the oats, which retards rather than increases the egg production. Then, again, the point of the oat hull is very sharp, and when fed to any extent it is possible that it will lacerate the interior of the crop of the fowl, creating an irritation that may lead to disease. Some of the best authorities in the veterinary world claim that much of the poultry that dies without apparent cause may be attributed to the irritation of the internal parts of the crop and the passage to the gizzard with the sharp points of oats and other sharp pointed grain. Whether this be true or not can be substantiated by those who feed any quantity of oats to their poultry. The greater part of the oats that are fed to poultry at the present time is ground into meal and mixed into the mash food.

Eggs For Hatching.

Much depends upon the selection of eggs for hatching. Eggs for this purpose should be of uniform shape and size and thickness of shell, says a recent bulletin of the Connecticut experiment station. Rough shelled, dirty and mottled eggs with thin shells should be excluded. "There is some doubt as to the advisability of setting small eggs. While it is possible that they may be as fertile and produce as many chicks as larger eggs it is probable that pullets from the former will have a tendency to lay small eggs." Small eggs should therefore be avoided.

Eggs which are over five days old should not be used. "Every egg should be carefully dated when taken from the nest in order to avoid error on this point. While good hatches have been secured from eggs that were three weeks old when placed in the incubator, as a rule they cannot be expected to hatch well after they are ten days old."

Granulated Meat For Poultry.

For those who have neither time nor opportunity to prepare meat in other forms for their poultry the prepared granulated stuff is an excellent substitute and is so cheap that it should never be left out of the diet for growing chickens and for winter layers, says A. V. Meers in Western Poultry Journal. It is made either from horseflesh or from the offal of cattle and is a composition of flesh and bone boiled up and dried and then pressed into blocks, afterward being passed through a mill to be broken up into convenient sizes. It is so prepared that it will keep fresh and sweet for some considerable time, and when chickens are fed entirely on dry food it is convenient to give them their meat in this form. The amount to be given depends largely upon the size of the birds, but a little every day to each one will make a great difference.

Large Pastures.

As a means of furnishing exercise a large pasture is one of the best as well as the most profitable adjuncts to successful swine raising. We say "large pasture," because we notice that of a good many farms the "hog pasture" consists of a two or three acre lot with perhaps thirty to sixty head of swine in same, and as a matter of course contains not a single square foot of grass.—Iowa Swine Breeder.

"As you advance further in your art," said Gounod to a young poet, "you will come to think of the great poets of the past as I now appreciate the great musicians of former times. When I was your age I used to say 'I, Mozart and I, now I say 'Mozart and I, now I say 'Mozart'."
