He Matched It.
After ten hours he returned, foot-sore and weary. His wife met him at the door.

"I thought you were dead," she told him.

"You should have known better than that," he said. "Do you remember that last piece of net I tried to match for you? You scolded me because there was a difference of an eighth of an inch in the width of the folds, and I vowed that I would never again return from matching anything for you until I had found the exact thing you wanted."

He handed her a package.

"Here is that old robe binding braid that you told me to buy. I found it last Monday in Billings, Mont. I have looked for it in 37 states."

She tore off the wrappings.

"It is a little too dark," she said.

"But the sample faded some in 10 years, he reminded her.

"It is a little too heavy, besides."

"But handling by thousands of clerks has worn the sample away some. It was heavier when I started out."

"I suppose I can make it do," she said.—Newark News.

Natural Conclusion.

Mrs. Simmonds glanced at the scare headline, "Bank Robbed! Police at Sea!" and laid down the sheet. "Now, look at that, Ez!" she ejaculated, repeating the headline aloud. "Here's a big city bank broke into by burglars, and the city police force all off fishin' somewhere! What a scandal!"—Judge.

Hard-Headed.

A cavalry sergeant had endured the stupidity of a particularly hopeless recruit for days. The "rookie" having more flagrantly disregarded instructions than ever one morning, was admonished thus by his disgusted sergeant:

"Don't ever dare, your numskull, to come at the horses from behind without speaking to them first. If you don't they'd be kicking at that thick head of yours, and then soon there'd be half the mounts of the squadron gone lame!"—Scraps.

An Obedient Child.

The curly-haired little sprout of the house came running to her father in the study, and, throwing her arms about his neck, whispered confidentially in his ear.

"Oh, papa, it's raining!"

Papa was writing on a subject that occupied his mind to the exclusion of matters aside, so he said, rather sharply, "Well, let it rain."

"Yes, papa; I was going to," was her quick response.—Harper's.

The Art of War.

"Do you think airships could be used effectively in warfare?"

"They might," replied the skeptical person, "if we could provide the airships and induce the enemy to go up in them."—Washington Star.

Fortunate.

"So the book has been withdrawn from publication? A good job, too; it was perfectly scandalous. When was the order made?"

"Just a week after you had read it."

"Ah! I was in luck, then."

Cheap Blowing.

Roderick—"Why was the count so anxious to blow the horn when invited on the coaching trip?"

Van Albert—"Why, that's the only way he could blow himself without spending any money."—Chicago News.

A Ruling Passion.

"The thermometer was a hundred at noon yesterday," said the man who watches the weather. "Today it is down to 98."

"My!" rejoined his wife. "Isn't that a bargain?"—Washington Star.

COLDS BREED CATARRH

Her Terrible Experience Shows How Peruna Should Be in Every Home to Prevent Colds.

Mrs. C. S. Sagerer, 1311 Woodland Ave., Kansas City, Mo., writes: "I feel it a duty to you and to others that may be afflicted like myself, to speak for Peruna. My trouble came after a gripple eight or nine years ago, a gathering in my head and neuralgia. I suffered most all the time. My nose, ears and eyes were badly affected for the last two years. I think from your description of internal catarrh that I must have had that also. I suffered very severely."

"Nothing ever relieved me like Peruna. It keeps me from taking cold. With the exception of some deafness I am feeling perfectly cured. I am forty-six years old. I feel that words are inadequate to express my praise for Peruna."

Catarrh in Bad Form.

Mrs. Jennie Darling, R. F. D. 1, Smyrna, Maine, writes: "I was unable to do my work for four years, as I had catarrh in a bad form. I coughed incessantly, and got so weak and was confined to my bed."

"Peruna came to my relief and by faithfully using it, I am able to do my work. Peruna is the best medicine that I ever took."

THOUGHT SHE HAD PRACTISED

Frenchman's Suspicious Really Something of a Compliment to the Men of America.

"Claude Grahame White, the English aviator, praised, at a dinner in New York, the good fellowship of Americans."

"The American woman is regarded abroad as an angel," he said. "The man is admittedly a good fellow, but an angel he is far from being."

"You've heard of the Frenchman, perhaps, whose sweetheart spent the summer in America? After her return the poor Frenchman seemed quite blue."

"What's the matter with you?" a friend asked.

"I am worried," the other muttered, "about my fiancée. You see, since her return from America she kisses so much better than she used to."

Reporter in Luck.

City Editor (hurriedly)—Anything new about that suicide in the St. Fashion hotel?

Reporter—Not much. The man was a stranger, about my size. Shot himself with a .22 caliber revolver. Had on a dress suit at the time. The body had been taken to the morgue.

City Editor—"Bout your size. That's lucky. I want you to report a big society wedding in an hour. Rush around to the morgue and ask the keeper to lend you that dress suit."

Good Arrangement.

A genial looking gentleman wanted an empty bottle in which to mix a solution, and went to a chemist's to purchase one. Selecting one that answered his purpose, he asked the shopman how much it would cost.

"Well," was the reply, "if you want the empty bottle it will be a penny, but if you want anything in it you can have it for nothing." "Well, that's all right," said the customer; "put in a cork."

The Preface of Trade.

"I had a curious experience yesterday," said Farmer Cornsossel.

"What was it?"

"A stranger came along and told me a funny story and didn't try to sell me anything."

Appreciation of good accomplished helps more than much advice on the good yet to be done.

SYNOPSIS.

Andy Meelen, aged millionaire miner, is dying and orders a will drawn up, leaving all his property to the son of a sister of whom he has heard nothing for years, and whose married name he does not know. Meelen was married years before, but left his wife after a bad form. I coughed incessantly, and got so weak and was confined to my bed.

another knowing wink, "at that time I only suspected certain things. I meant to work up the case later. If the fact turned out to be as I thought, it looked as though a good thing might be made out of it."

"Meaning to turn it to account with me afterwards?" inquired Stennis.

"Sure!" was the unabashed answer, now that his unsuspected plot to marry Eunice had ignominiously failed.

Silence ensued, both men being busy with their thoughts; Hews looked for a quick and easy capitulation. At length Wilfrid spoke again:

"How much time will you allow me to consider this proposal of yours?" he inquired composedly.

"Time? Why, how much time do you want? Not a day, not an hour! It's take it or leave it, now or never!"

"I rather think I'll leave it, Mr. Hews," drawled Wilfrid, a half-smile lifting one corner of his tawny mustache.

"You'll never do it!" exclaimed the astounded and mortified Hews.

"Won't it?" queried Stennis. "You have made one grand mistake, Mr. Hews: You took me for as big a rogue as yourself! A fool I may be, but not that! Why, you despicable villain, do you imagine I would conspire with such a rat as you to defraud a woman, a motherless girl, and she my own flesh and blood?"

The tempter stared at the tempted in blank dismay. That any one with a sane head on his shoulders should reject such a plain business proposition passed the moral comprehension of Roger Hews—a man without a conscience.

"And now I'll tell you what you may do," said Stennis, hugely enjoying the other's discomfort. "You can go right downtown and tell Mr. Passavant what you have just told me."

"See here, Mr. Stennis," began the other, cringing, anxiously.

"Not another word on that subject, Mr. Hews," insisted Wilfrid decidedly.

"But first I will trouble you to write the name and address of that young lady, my cousin."

"I'll be damned if I do!" retorted Hews passionately.

"You'll certainly be damned if you don't!" exclaimed Wilfrid grimly, clutching his riding-whip firmly and advancing towards the now trembling conspirator. "The name, you scoundrel, before I shake it out of you!"

"Oh, you know her well enough, curse you!" he blurted out. "It's Eunice Trevecca!"

Stennis fell back a pace, his face the picture of blank wonder and astonishment.

"Eunice Trevecca!" he gasped. "She my cousin and the daughter of Andrew Meelen?"

"That's what I said!" Hews answered sullenly. And then, with vehement spite, he added: "A sweet mess you've made of it in that queer coming for you trouble. As for Miss Trevecca—I shall have the pleasure of breaking the news to her myself!"

But Stennis, if he heard them, paid no attention to the words; his brain was busy taking in the full significance of this amazing climax to the strange disclosures of the day, the truth of which he could no longer doubt. However, this was no time for connected thinking; the main thing was to let the truth be known at once.

He went to the door and unlocked it, then turned to the crestfallen Hews with these words:

"Oblige me by immediately taking your story and your proofs to Mr. Passavant. He will not value your information quite as extravagantly as you do, but he will doubtless pay you something for your trouble. As for Miss Trevecca—I shall have the pleasure of breaking the news to her myself!"

CHAPTER X.

"I was never so sorely disappointed in any one before," said Horatio Passavant pathetically to Clara after recounting to her the complete collapse of fortune that had come to Wilfrid Stennis.

"Will he have nothing at all?" inquired Miss Passavant, the money, as usual, uppermost in her mind.

"Under the will he could legally hold on to all, but if Miss Trevecca chose to contest she could probably win it, seeing that the instrument was executed under a total misapprehension on the part of the testator, but Stennis insists upon relinquishing everything—quite quietly, as I told him; but he is obstinate. He says it is what Andrew Meelen would have wished, and declares he is going to earn his own living once more."

"I admire him for that," said Clara, with a half-smile.

"What shall you do, my dear?" inquired the lawyer anxiously.

"You must take me away to Europe at once, papa; it will be all over town in 24 hours, and I will not permit myself to be commiserated or made the recipient of polite condolences."

"Perhaps that would be the best thing," assented the old worldling. "Carboy is coming on, and I can get him to take charge of the office for awhile."

Clara had her way, as usual, and thus escaped much of the gossip about the breaking-off of the marriage. A year later she married a Russian count twice her age, and New York society knew her no more.

It was even as lawyer Passavant had said. Wilfrid chivalrously refused to touch another dollar of Andrew Meelen's money!

The interview between him and Eunice Trevecca, though very brief, was a touching and a trying one. Acting on one of those boyish impulses which will never leave him, and actuated by an exalted idea of making restitution and doing penance, he rode and walked straight to Macdougall street after leaving Roger Hews.

Poor Ananias.

"This," said the guide as he led his little band of tourists about the odoriferous byways of Damascus, "is the home of Ananias."

"That's funny," said the thin Connecticut man from Danbury. "Is posed old what's-his-name lived in Pittsburg. But maybe this is his summer home."

The guide shook his head.

"His summer home is not mentioned in ears polite," he said and passed on.

COUNTRY AWAKE TO DANGER

Increase of Sanatoria and Hospitals for Consumptives is Most Gratifying.

The growth of the crusade against tuberculosis in the United States is shown to good advantage in the two directories that have been issued by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis and the one in preparation. The first tuberculosis directory published in 1904, by the tuberculosis committee of the New York Charity Organization Society and the National Association listed 133 sanatoria and hospitals for consumptives in the United States, for some of which preliminary provision only has been made. The combined capacity of these institutions was only 8,000 beds. Thirty-two special dispensaries and thirty-nine anti-tuberculosis organizations summed up practically all of the fighting force enumerated in the first directory.

The second directory was prepared by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis and published under the auspices of the Russell Sage Foundation in August, 1908. This directory listed 240 sanatoria and hospitals, an increase of 107 from the former directory; 158 dispensaries, an increase of 126; and 195 associations, an increase of 156. The number of hospital beds listed in 1908 was 14,014.

The new directory that will be issued soon, will list over 400 sanatoria and hospitals with a bed capacity of nearly 25,000; more than 300 special tuberculosis dispensaries; and fully 450 anti-tuberculosis associations and committees. Since the first directory was issued in 1904, the increase in the number of agencies fighting consumption aggregates nearly 500 per cent.

The National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis would like to get in touch with all agencies engaged in the fight against tuberculosis, in order that they may be listed in the new directory.

AN INTOLERABLE ITCHING

"Just about two years ago, some form of humor appeared on my scalp. The beginning was a slight itching, but it grew steadily worse until, when I combed my hair, the scalp became raw and the ends of the comb-teeth would be wet with blood. Most of the time there was an intolerable itching, in a painful, burning way, very much as a bad, raw burn, if deep, will itch and smart when first beginning to heal. Combing my hair was positive torture. My hair was long and tangled terribly because of the blood and scabs. This continued growing worse and over half my hair fell out. I was in despair, really afraid of becoming totally bald."

"Sometimes the pain was so great that, when partially awake, I would scratch the worst places so that my finger-tips would be bloody. I could not sleep well, and after being asleep a short time, that awful stinging pain would commence and then I would wake up nearly wild with the
