

AS USUAL.

A late eastern dispatch states that six million dollars have been already subscribed in Chicago for the World's fair of 1902. Meantime New York has been talking—that is her talkers have been shouting that there is no place as good as New York in which to hold the World's fair. So the thing will go on until New York shall be no longer a factor in the question of locality for this immense undertaking. Truly there are many reasons why New York should be the chosen place. The fact that it is the metropolis, its cosmopolitan character, its situation, surrounded as it is by magnificent waters, large number of hotels and general adaptation to the handling of immense throngs of strangers, are all in its favor. Another fact which ought to be considered is that the New Yorkers, inhabitants of the metropolis, would not be so apt to make a business of robbing their guests by extortion as would the inhabitants of an inland city like Chicago which must always partake more or less of the character of a country town, no matter if it had ten million inhabitants. This matter of extortionate prices for entertainment is a very serious one, viewed with regard to the impression we may make upon guests,—and that is the most important view that can be taken of the whole matter. According to accounts brought from the last national Republican convention, held in Chicago, those who should have been public entertainers in that town became simply public robbers. It was difficult to obtain decent food, or any lodging, and the prices charged made it out of the question for any but wealthy men to remain a week without seriously injuring their financial status. If the city by the lake has the world's fair, and again overcharges in proportion to the crowd that will be there, a single day's attendance will deplete the purse of a man of ordinary means and send him home penniless, while the wealthy European will become a captive for debt and be compelled to await a ransom from home.

But New York will probably lose the exhibition just the same; because New Yorkers are so much in the habit of having everything their own way that they will not make a special effort to have the exhibition held there. New York has apparently become indifferent to public favors, and will let the prize slip away, while Chicago will make a great and perhaps successful effort to obtain it. Yet it is by no means certain that Chicago is to have her own way in this matter. The same artificial causes of prosperity that built her up are building up other towns further west, and when the final struggle comes, in congress, Chicago may find herself in the novel situation of being "left." Still her citizens who subscribe six million dollars toward the enterprise, while those of the other cities sleep, will have no cause to regret for a lack of activity. They have in them the true spirit of progress which ought to be cherished by every man in every live town.

GIANTS AND DWARFS.

The Great Orestes was 11½ feet tall. Galabro, an Arabian, was 10 feet tall. Farnum, the Scotchman, was 11½ feet tall.

The Emperor Maximilian was 5½ feet tall.

Evans, who lived in King Charles 1's time, was 7½ feet tall.

Women are curious creatures. A wife who will insist that her husband shall not go out of the house without two undershirts, a liver pad and muffler on, in addition to his other clothes, will come out of a hot kitchen on a Monday morning, bareheaded, and paddle around half an hour hanging out clothes, trying to get ahead of the woman next door.

J. B. Watson, the Australian quartz reef king, died recently at Sydney, at the age of 64. He was a native of Paisley, Scotland, and emigrated with his father's family to Sydney, and afterward to California and Sandhurst, and finally to the Bendigo gold mine, where he made a fortune estimated at $200,000,000.

HE SENT IT EAST.

For a year I was troubled with pains in my back and side, and headaches, the result of liver and kidney trouble. I was attracted to Joy's Vegetable Sarsaparilla by the startling testimonials in the papers and which seemed so practical I was induced to try it, knowing that as it was purely vegetable, it would at any rate do no harm. It acted as a gentle laxative and after the second bottle my pains and aches disappeared and I felt like a new man. It did so much for me that I sent several bottles to my family in New Jersey, who also took it with the most satisfactory results.

The Big Bend Tunnel Company, operating on Feather river, Yuba county, California, has collapsed, and the loss to shareholders is said to be $2,000,000. A tunnel was run to divert from its natural channel the Feather river flow to drain the bed for the purpose of getting at the vast wealth in gold dust supposed to be buried there. The river bottom was drained but the yellow metal was not found in paying quantities, hence the collapse of the company, which is a Buffalo, New York, incorporation.

The greatest dam in the world is nearing completion at Lyons, France. It will be 1000 feet long, 100 feet wide at the base and 175 feet high. The structure was begun a century ago.
