TRUE AND FALSE COFFEE.

Methods of Making This Drink Among Different Nations- Coffee and Religion are Inseparable.

W. L. Alden, in New York Times. There is nothing more saddening to the arnest Christian mind than the recipes for making coffee that are given in American cookery books. With hardly an exception they direct that coffee should be boiled. well might a Fijan cookery book direct that a missionary should be stewed. Coffee never was and never can be made by boil-

African pagan for boiling coffee, on the ground that they are in what the Roman burch would call a state of invincible ig norance; but for intelligent Christian peo ole who boil coffee there can be no excuse The writers of American cookery books cannot plead ignorance, for in most of them it is mentioned, in a careless way, that French people make their coffee by pouring boiling water on it. This shows that they know what is right, but perversely follow what is wrong.

Boiled coffee can be consumed by per ons of coarse taste when mixed with a great deal of boiled milk, but when taken without milk it bears only a distant resemblance to true coffee. Chemists tell us that when coffee is boiled certain noxious elements-say bi-chloride of mercury and sulpho-cyanide of potassium-are set free The true coffee flavor is thus overpowered and the stomach of the consumer is out raged. It is the drinker of boiled coffee who complains that coffee is injurious, little knowing that they have never tasted real

It is a remarkable fact that the coffee of a nation is closely associated with its re-ligion. Speaking broadly and generally, it may be said that true or infused coffee is the result of Catholicism, and that false or coiled coffee is the result of Protestantism France, Italy and Spain produce true cot fee; while England, America and Germany oil their coffee. Even in the latter counries when true coffee is found it is where Protestantism is weak, and high church households in England and in this country requently drink real coffee. On the other hand it must be confessed that Catholic is as ignorant of cot-as is Calvanistic Scotland. Ireland is Calvanistic this exception to the for general rule there is as yet no adequate explanation. There is no reason why Proestantism should not have true coffee. What if Luther did confine himself to beer and Calvin to lime juice. We who live in a more enlightened age need not regulate our beverages by the example of the Reformers

There is nothing contained either in de-crees of the Countil of Trent or the Augsberg Confession as to coffee, and the Amercan Protestant has as much right to coffee as has a Roman Cardinal. There is no duty more important than that of teaching Americans to make coffee Evangelists ought to go up and down the land awakening men and women to the enormity of boiling coffee. Every coffee pot without a strainer should be publicly smashed, and the offense of boiling coffee should ostracize the offender. With the

A pound of guano, with two pounds of Rich soil, light in texture, is best for wa termelons. On heavy clay soils the best method for growing them is to bank up a heap of manure and cover with four inches of dirt, planting seeds on four sides and keeping the heap damp by pouring water into the centre.

The Jersey cow, Mary Anne of St. Lamberts, will not be tested again, so it is re-ported. Her owner thinks she has shown her capacity under a high test, and she will now be put upon grass only, upon which food he believes that she can make twentyseven pounds of butter per week. As a rule, in establishing a forest plantation, it is better to grow several varieties together. Then if some insect enemy or other trouble should destroy one of them the residue may remain uninjured and thrifty. If all do well, those varieties that e to be of the greatest value may be promi weather of summer seeds must be planted more deeply, so as to be kept sufficiently moist to insure germination.
