Secession of Convention.
February 13th, 1861, first regular session began, and ended May 1st, 1861.

June 12th, 1861, first adjourned session began, and ended July 1st, 1861.

November 13th, 1861, second adjourned session began, and adjourned never to meet again, December 6th, 1861.

This will ever be known as the "Secession Convention of Virginia." It was composed of the ablest body of statesmen who had ever assembled in the capitol of the Old Dominion. A large majority were elderly men, who had occupied many positions of honor and trust in the councils of their state and nation, and had retired to the quiet shades of their loved homes, never expecting to be called again into public service. They loved the Union they were about to create, and now their sons had met together for the last time to fight to perpetuate that Union they loved so well. Seven southern states had already seceded, Virginia stood for the Union like a stone wall against a strong pressure of those states, and the young hot blood element of the convention. She steadily maintained her large majority against seceding. Three different committees had been sent to Washington to invoke the aid of President Lincoln.

The Climax.
Nothing definite was accomplished until after many anxious weeks, when, on April 14th, 1861, the President heeded Virginia's earnest appeal and commissioned General Campbell to go to Richmond as authority to negotiate with the convention in its effort to hold the state in the Union. He had assured that Virginia would not withdraw from the Union, if he would agree not to call on her for troops to aid in coercing her sister seceding states.

That ever memorable Friday night, General Campbell met the committee on federal relations in the east parlor of the old Ballard house of the Exchange-Ballard hotel. It was composed of nine of the most prominent and patriotic members who were opposed to secession. General Campbell stated the object of his mission and showed his authority from Mr. Lincoln to treat with the convention. He promised that "if Virginia would stand firm and not secede she would not be called upon to furnish aid in coercing the states which had done so."

When this announcement was made, the effect was electrical. Old, gray-headed members, worn statesmen, who loved their country as devotedly as any men North or South, embraced each other and wept for joy that the Union had been preserved. This touching scene was related to me not only by ex-Governor Samuel Price, of Lewisburg, West Virginia, who was a distinguished member of the committee, but also by his eldest daughter and the daughter of Mr. Carrington, the proprietor of that noted hostelry, who sat in the adjoining west parlor and witnessed the whole proceeding through the parting portieres between the two parlors.

It was agreed at the same time that Virginia would also use every honorable means to bring back the seceding States, and thus have the effect of preventing others from leaving the Union.

General Campbell returned to Washington on Saturday, April 15, and made his report that afternoon to Mr. Lincoln. He afterwards stated that "the President seemed greatly pleased at the success of his mission." His Secretary of State, Mr. William H. Seward, and one other prominent member of his cabinet heard that same evening what had been done. They immediately called at the White House and violently opposed the concession which had been made, of any other. They sat up late that night, and eventually induced the President to disregard the agreement which had been made, and on Sunday morning, April 15th, he issued that never-to-be forgotten order calling for 75,000 volunteers, not only to march across Virginia to make war on her sister States, but demanded that she should furnish her full quota of troops to help to do it. This declaration of civil war struck Richmond like a clap of thunder out of a clear sky.

All the powers of earth could not resist that unexpected death blow. Pandeumion reigned throughout Virginia and the entire South. Thus the Mother of States and statesmen was forced to withdraw from that Union which she had aided in establishing with the blood of her patriots. This occurred on Monday, April 17th, at 4:15 o'clock P. M. The civilized world knows and has felt the result. These same hoary-headed statesmen who only three days fore went for joy at the assurance that the Union would be saved, now wept bitter tears of disappointment. It has been stated that at the time the vote was taken there was not a dry eye in the convention.

States rights was bred in the bone of all Southerners. They believed they had the right to peacefully withdraw from the Union when the Federal government refused to protect their person and property. Even Mr. Lincoln endorsed this doctrine in his speech in Congress in 1848. The New England States had adopted secessionist resolutions in two conventions for much less cause. One on account of the Louisiana purchase and the other when Texas was admitted into the Union. Simply for the reason that additional territory would be added to the South and she would continue to control the general government as she had done up to the election of Mr. Lincoln in 1860.

Hon. George W. Summers, justly called "The Daniel Webster of West Virginia," and who had been tendered by Mr. Lincoln a seat on the Supreme Bench of the United States, was an able member of the Committee on Federal Relations in that secessionist convention. He said in his speech delivered in Wheeling in 1863 that "it was not the firing on Fort Sumter that carried Virginia out of the Union." We went on steadily and firmly voting in that convention under the constant announcement of its bombardment, its success and final triumph. No man gave way. Our large majority was maintained on every resolution.

The Union men, those elected as Union men (as most of them were), who ultimately gave way, did not give way upon the ground that Fort Sumter had been attacked. The pretext, cause for the secession, was the proclamation of President Lincoln calling for 75,000 troops to march across the sacred soil of Virginia to make war on her Southern sister States, which they (we) chose to announce and act upon as a declaration of war.

That convention was composed of 125 members, said to be the ablest body of men that ever assembled in Virginia. On the final ballot, April 17th, 1861, eighty-nine voted for secession, fifty-five voted against it, and eight did not vote. All of them have "crossed over the river." Hon. J. C. McGrave, of Kingwood, West Virginia, was elected to the House of Representatives in 1810, 1819, 1827 years old.

It is worthy of note that the unfortunate assassination of President Lincoln occurred on April 14th, just four years after, and about the same hour that General Campbell and the convention signed the agreement referred to above.

The End.
I arrived in Lewisburg, West Virginia, on April 13th, from the surrender of General Lee. About 6 o'clock P. M. of the following day, I was capturing with Governor Lincoln's army on his front veranda, we noticed a man on horseback coming rapidly up the street. He halted at the front gate, and all of us, much excited, ran out to learn what he wanted. He said if Governor Price lived there, when informed he did, he said he had an important document from the governor from the president of the United States. I said Governor Price was out at his Richlands farm, four miles from town. As his horse appeared very tired and I had a fresh one at hand, I could take a short cut through the open country. I would be pleased to deliver the document.

He hesitated, saying he was ordered to deliver it to him in person, but when assured by the governor's family that it was perfectly safe, and I could deliver it much sooner than he could, he handed me the official envelope. I went as fast as my horse could carry me. I found the governor at his barn cleaning wheat in an old-fashioned windmill, with two negro men assisting him. He had returned from a sack of wheat which his faithful servants had buried under the barn floor to keep body and soul together during the occupancy of the Federal troops. They were forced to hide what little was left to subsist on. I dismounted, handed him the large envelope, saying, "Here is a message from President Lincoln." He quickly stepped out of the door and broke the seal with trembling hands. The whole country was terribly excited. Dire rumors of destruction and death were being circulated. We were fearful that Grant's and Lee's armies of seventy would be induced by the United States army to enter the coal mining industry, of Stanton and Seward, were very bitter and uncompromising towards the South, and that they had a remarkable influence over the president. It was reported by marauding bands of Federal cavalry, claiming to be gathering up Federal property, regardless of whether it was branded U. S. or not, that we would be banished from our impoverished homes, imprisoned or "shot on the spot." As Governor Price read this letter his eyes began to sparkle, and bright smiles lighted up his pleasant face, and, handing it to me, he said: "Coleman, good news, good news!" Turning quickly to one of his servants he said: "Sam, saddle my horse quickly." Though it has been over forty-five years ago, that letter is indelibly engraved on my mind, and I repeat it here almost verbatim.

I proceeded immediately to Richmond and convene your legislature. Tell your people to come back and hang up their hats on the same peg they hung them on before the war.

Though he was sixty years old, we returned to Lewisburg in a rapid gallop, arriving after sundown. I got a hasty lunch, a fresh horse, and rode all night, thirty-nine miles, to Jackson River depot, now Clifton Forge. The old Virginia Central railroad, now the Chesapeake and Ohio railroad, had been completed only a few weeks at the beginning of the war between the states. The governor took the morning train for Richmond to convene the legislature. When he arrived at Staunton, Hon. Sandy Stuart, who had been President Buchanan's secretary of the interior; John Hugh Shiefley, Colonel John B. Baldwin; Mr. Michie met him at the depot. They had heard he was coming. They informed him that President Lincoln had been assassinated the previous night. Governor Price returned home on the next train west. Soon after this followed the infamous "carpetbag" rule of plunder and murder throughout the southern states. This was the greatest calamity, not excepting the Civil war, that ever befell the south. She lamented Mr. Lincoln's death almost as much as the north; not so much because she loved him, but because she hated and feared Andy Johnson, who had betrayed her. Mr. Lincoln had visited Richmond only two days before his death, and he received more cordially than he anticipated. He had already promulgated his generous and humane policy of reconstruction. The leading men of the south firmly believed that had he been enforced, his policies against bitter opposition, there would never have been any "carpetbag" or "Ku-Klux-Klan" rule in the south, and she would have been twenty-five years further advanced in every line of endeavor than she is to-day.

William Smith, known as "Fighting Extraj Billy," because he had, been a gallant general in the Confederate army and an able governor once before, had been elected lieutenant governor during the war. On the evacuation of Richmond, April 2, 1865, Governor Smith had left with "President Davis," or at least could not be communicated with, and the above quoted message from President Lincoln was sent to Governor Price, lieutenant and acting governor of Virginia. Governor Price was the father of the "Old Virginia Central railroad" and a director in that road until its reorganization and changed to the Chesapeake and Ohio road in the seventies under C. P. Huntington. He was president of the constitutional convention that adopted the present constitution of West Virginia in 1872. He was also appointed by Governor Jacob to the United States Senate in 1875 to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Senator Caperton.

J. COLEMAN ALDERSON, Charleston, W. Va.

Major Coleman Alderson, the author of the above article, will be remembered by the large majority of Wheeling people having been located here in Wheeling in the insurance business for many years previous to 1900. During recent years, Major Alderson has made his residence in Charleston where he has been largely interested in coal and land operations. Major Alderson was himself a confederate veteran and saw some very hard service.

The article above will be read with great interest by the people of West Virginia.

his protest and against his will while he was in another State trying a law case. He regarded the nomination as a party call and went into the race against Hon. Joseph Holt Gaines, the Republican nominee, to overcome a Republican majority in the district in round numbers of about 6,500. In that campaign Mr. Littlepage made 103 speeches—a sometimes three speeches a day—and waged the most determined contest that has ever been witnessed in West Virginia, with the result that he overcame the Republican majority and secured his election by a majority of 1,866 votes being the first Democrat elected in the district, in about twenty years. His district includes in part the Kanawha and New River coal field, and is a very wealthy district.

Mr. Littlepage stands very high as a lawyer and citizen throughout his district and State. He was a candidate for the nomination for Governor two years ago, but was defeated in the convention by the Hon. Lewis Cassatt. The sentiment is now prevailing throughout the State that had Mr. Littlepage been nominated he would have been elected. He bears the reputation of being a very grateful man, never forgetting a kindness, and is faithful in his friendships and thoroughly reliable. He stands for the under man in life. Works hard, late and early as a Congressman, and is reflecting credit upon the country by his many, conservative and wise course in Washington as a representative of all the people. He is a patriotic man of ability, and has fine qualities of mind and heart.

Senators Are Modest.

No doubt the next edition of the directory will see but a few lines about the Littlepage career if he is at all sensitive over the fun the papers are having with his first effort. The two new Senators from West Virginia have confessed themselves with very brief and straightforward biographies, Clarence Watson taking but ten lines in the book, while Senator Chilton takes up three times the space to tell of his service to the State and his party Senator Watson merely recounts that he was born 47 years ago last Monday, was educated in the common schools and left school to enter the coal mining industry, of
