

MANY BALLOTS NOT CAST BECAUSE OF CHANGE IN REGISTRATION LAWS

VOTERS BEING RELUCTANT TO DECLARE PARTY TO REGISTRARS CAUSED MANY NOT TO VOTE.

Immediate Registration Also Prohibited Many From Casting Ballot—Vote Was Small.

The new registration law was the cause of the light vote being cast in Ohio county yesterday was the general consensus of opinion in official circles last night after the polls had closed and the number of ballots cast had been announced. Hereafter the vote has always been more than fifty per cent of the registration, but the percentage was greatly below that number yesterday.

Evidence that the change in registration was the cause of a number of voters not being cast was the fact that many voters went to the polls yesterday, to find themselves registered in another party than their own, while many were non-committal when the registrations were made and were therefore not permitted to cast their ballot.

WASHINGTON

West Virginia News — Notes and Gossip at the Nation's Capital

(BY CHARLES BROOKS SMITH)

Building Boom

The slight which strikers brought to the capital these days and never fails to elicit comment from them is the building boom that this city is enjoying. Motorists say that they have seen no where during their travels this summer such activity in the building trades as they see here in Washington. It is to say the least, extraordinary. The like of it has never happened before to this beautiful and rapidly growing city, though it has had some pretty swift and sizeable building booms in its time. The present one makes all its time gone before look small.

How to Go Broke

Playing the game and the bucket shown here fairly well established in the public mind as sure things for a man to go broke on, but take it from a West Virginia politician who arrived today, a primary campaign is no slouch when it comes to efficiently cleaning a candidate of his bank roll. "I'd be ashamed to be quoted as giving my estimate of the total amount that the present primary campaign in West Virginia has cost all hands round the state. The bulk of it went for legitimate use, such as building up an organization with headquarters, field agents and advertising of all kinds. Printers ink is when wisely used, efficacious, but it is also expensive when used in large quantities to cover an entire State. Man, dear, but it does prove that the so-called inexhaustible bank roll can be exhausted, all right."

Abolish Department

The mining department of the American Federation of Labor in that organization's big building on Massachusetts avenue, is no longer. It has been abolished by President Samuel Gompers, with the statement that this action was taken for the sake of economy. That is not the reason for this drastic action discussed by men connected with the labor movement here. They say that it is an outward symptom of the existing business which, it is claimed, exists between Gompers and John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers, of the department was in charge of James Lord. He has disappeared from Washington and it is announced that he has gone to the Pacific Coast to take up the work of an organizer since more.

Feeling of Relief

The settlement of the railroad strike on the plans evolved and presented by President Harding is confidently expected to be consummated, and there is a feeling of relief in the capital, particularly noticeable in official circles. The settlement of the coal strike is looked at as a nasty matter that will be settled in comparatively short space of time, once the railroad trouble is out of the way. The entire outlook of official Washington has undergone a material change, being now brighter and more cheerful looking. However, it never was so dark as to cause either official or civil Washington to show any signs of hopeless despondency. In common with the rest of the country, Washington expected the industrial upheaval to be settled in due course of time after the leaders on both sides had had time to undergo the cooling off treatment.

Warren, Aug. 1.—

Except for the banking of the Trumbull Cliffs Furnace company's 550-ton capacity blast furnace 19 days ago, local steel mill schedules are not affected by the rail and coal strikes. IF YOU

Have a little rupture that is giving you no trouble at the present time, you had better make sure that it will not get worse, your only way of doing this is by attending to it now. They always get worse if neglected—it is sometimes slow, but as sure as death or taxes.

Don't fool yourself by thinking you can get along without it; you will have to have it if not now, later, and then it will be much worse and more difficult to correct.
