SCATHING DENUNCIATION

Of the Indifference of Society to Social Purity.

"The Ravisher of Innocence Goes Unwhipped of Justice and Is Not Even Ostracized by What is Denominated 'Society.'"

The Baptist, Episcopalian, Methodist and Presbyterian congregations listened together last night to a most able discourse by the Rev. W. C. C. Foster, Pastor of the Presbyterian church, as an exposition of the well-known scriptural passage: "But whose shall cause one of these little ones which believe on me to stumble, it is profitable for him that a great millstone should be hanged about his neck, and that he should be sunk in the depth of the sea." The speaker's idea was to show the opposite and contradictory views of values from a divine and a human stand point.

"Man is outweighed by dollars, people are outweighed by possessions. To protect property no stone is left unturned, the ablest counsel is secured, every point is guarded and fought for with the utmost care and earnestness; but who dares to affirm that this is so when it comes to a question of protecting persons?"

A man who should set fire to a great factory where little boys and girls were toiling like slaves, pale, sickly, their little lives crushed out of them, would be hunted from one end of the country to the other, and when captured would be punished without mercy; but the employer of those children, who is even more guilty in the sight of God, is shielded by the law and by the courts. The man who sins against property is punished to the very limit; the man who sins against human life and tramples upon the sacredness of childhood is exonerated and possibly sent to Congress to make laws for the nation. Who does not know that the destroyers of life seem to be safer under our laws than the destroyer of things? Slaying of virtue, assassins of character may fling out their red lights and allure the young and innocent to enter the door which swings into hell. But suppose any man or woman, or any set of men and women should open up places for the manufacture of bombs and explosives and implements of destruction, with the deliberate purpose of using them to blow up buildings, or depots, or railroad tracks, or banks, or stores, how long would they be tolerated? Not for a single day.

Thus in what we call our civilized society persons may be outraged and attacked and despoiled, and flung as social wreckage upon the shores of life with comparative impunity; but woe to those who dare to take any such liberties with or make any such assaults upon property. In the eyes of the law it seems to be a greater crime to steal dollars or something that dollars will buy than to be a robber of virtue or a destroyer of purity. The man who forges a check or blows up a safe is given a short shrift; no sentiment is wasted over him; he is dragged off to jail and to judgment, but the man who makes it necessary to support Florence Crittenden homes, the pillager of purity, the ravisher of innocence, goes unwhipped of justice, and is not even punished by ostracism from the ranks of what is denominated 'society.' It all comes from the over emphasis of property and the under emphasis of life."
