REVELATIONS OF A WIFE

By Adele Garrison

WHY MADGE DECIDED TO KEEP KATIE.

I arose unusually early Monday morning. I wanted to be in the kitchen when Katie came, if she came back at all. She might be so angry, I told myself, at being barred from the apartment by the janitor the day before that she would never return.

Would I be glad or sorry if she did not come? Frankly, I did not know. On the one hand I did not know just how I was to get along without her. Dicky's mother was to arrive in a little over 24 hours. Then in a week began my series of talks to the history class of the Lotus Study club. I needed a good deal of time to outline the course I was to give. If ever I needed Katie, I needed her during the week before me.

But, on the other hand, the knowledge that had come to me the day before that Katie had been rummaging in my trunk, and had taken my prized lavalliere from its case, had been a distinct shock. True, she had put the ornament back, but I could not decide whether she had returned it from fright at someone's sudden entrance or whether she never had intended to steal it at all.

If she were a thief at heart, of course, I could not keep her. But if she were simply curious and meddling—well, those traits were annoying, I reflected, but Katie's good qualities certainly outweighed them.

With a sudden thought, I took the lavalliere from its case and fastened it about my neck. The beautiful black and pearl resting outside my simple blue morning gown. I knew that Katie would not fail to notice its appearance, for I never wore the ornament unless I went out in the evening, and then only with my prettiest gowns. She, of course, would realize that I had discovered her tampering with the case. I had seen enough of the mental workings of these alien girls in my teaching days to know that she would betray herself in some manner.

As I walked into the kitchen, I heard the sound of a key being turned cautiously in the lock, and I knew that Katie had returned. Of course, she supposed us to be still asleep, and this was the reason for the quietness of her movements. The knob turned, but the door refused to move as I had not yet drawn the bolt. I had slipped the bolt before I heard a muffled exclamation and I hurried to the door, drew the bolt and threw the door open.

"Come in, Katie," I strove to make my voice cordial. "The door was bolted, that is all." Katie came in, pale, wide-eyed, utterly speechless. Her usual noisy, cheerful self. She looked at me and tried to smile, then she caught sight of the lavalliere around my neck. She lifted a shaking finger and pointed to it.

"Why you got dot on?" she demanded. "Who do you ask that, Katie?" I returned, speaking very slowly, and looking her squarely in the eyes. Her answer was to throw herself on her knees by my side and grasp my hand in hers.

How Katie Explains. "Oh, Missis Graham, please forgive me. I no mean steal locket. I never steal nuthin', but I tink it so pretty, I want to get me one, so I sneak one day, watch you put it away. Den one day you out, I go look at it, try it on. Beil ring neck, I put it back, but no lock, not like yours, and so to door. Dot Missis Underwood she der. Den you came, den no chance since to feex. Oh, I so sorry. Don't send me to jail. Oh—"

She began to howl, and I put my hand on her shoulder and shook her. "Get up, Katie," I said sternly, "and stop this nonsense. Nobody is going to put you in jail. But I am going to scold you. Don't you know how dangerous it is to meddle with things? Many women would feel that you meant to steal the lavalliere, whether you really did or not, and would discharge you."

"Oh, Missis Graham, dear Missis Graham. You not fire me. You keep me! Oh, you so good!" The girl's face was convulsed with grief. I thought of the time, only two or three days before, when Katie had declared that she would leave because Dicky's mother was coming to live with us. What a bundle of contradictions she was, this untrained, undisciplined girl! But there was something about her that appealed to me. I determined to give her another trial.

"No, I never, I promise. See, I swear." "Very well, Katie. Wash your eyes now and get breakfast. We have a long day before us, and there is much to do. You know Mr. Graham's mother comes tomorrow, and I want to have everything nice for her."

"Yes, I know, I feex so nice. You see?" She smiled through her tears, with the familiar little phrase I had grown to look for. "I had turned toward the door, when a sudden thought made me turn back again."

"I think you said you wanted to get a lavalliere, Katie. I ought to tell you that they cost a great deal of money. I wouldn't like you to be disappointed about it."

"Oh, no, Missis Graham," Katie caroled enthusiastically. "I know a place where nice one, almost like yours, only big red stone, I get for four tollar, feefty cents. Dot not mooch. I get it for myself Easter present." She laughed gleefully. I went into the living room smiling. Dicky, in his bathrobe and slippers, was crossing the hall to the bathroom for his morning tub. "What's the joke, Madge?" "Wait until you are properly clothed and I'll tell you," I returned slyly.

When we met at breakfast Dicky raised his eyebrows at Katie's entrance, but made no comment until she had left the room. (To be continued.)

Women's War Work

Three meals without any wheat flour? Why yes, most everybody is having meals without any wheat flour. Don't get behind in the procession, keep up to date. Here's how the United States' food administration says it can be done.

No yeast bread. Instead of it, quickbreads made of cornmeal, corn flour, rice flour, oatmeal, barley, or other substitutes such as potatoes. Eat plenty of rice and hominy; no macaroni, spaghetti or omelette. Thicken gravies and sauces with rice flour, corn starch. Use breakfast foods made of corn, oats, rice, barley, none with any wheat. Use cakes made of barley, potato flour, rice, tapioca, gelatine, milk, fruit.

If you want any help in making potato substitute breads or any assistance of any kind, call Miss Lella Ogle, city home economics demonstrator, Bell 2708, Home 6346.

The following is the schedule for the county home economics agent for the week: Thursday afternoon before the Ardmore Home Economics club. Friday at the Portage school.

Red Cross meetings for Thursday are as follows: Auten Relief corps auxiliary, No. 18, will meet all day in their hall. St. Paul's auxiliary, No. 42, in the church parlors. Carroll auxiliary, No. 51, at headquarters. St. Paul's Lutheran auxiliary, No. 51, in the church parlors.

Miss Ogle, city home economics demonstrator will give substitution demonstrations at the Hungarian hall Thursday night before the women of the Hungarian Presbyterian parish and community. This meeting is free and public and all women are urged to attend. She will give a demonstration, Friday night, before the women of St. Stephen's parish and community in the Hungarian hall.

W. A. Nolan, of the Wilson Bros. shirt factory, is surely a faithful Red Cross worker. Maybe this shouldn't come in the "Women's War Work" column but since his service for the Red Cross has been so kindly given and so constant, it will not be so terribly out of place. This is what he has done: Since the opening of the hospital garments department of the Red Cross, he has directed the cutting of nearly all of the garments that have been made by that department. Several other factories in the city have given their "cutting" services but the Wilson factory has done the biggest part of it.

"Oh, Missis Graham, please forgive me. I no mean steal locket. I never steal nuthin', but I tink it so pretty, I want to get me one, so I sneak one day, watch you put it away. Den one day you out, I go look at it, try it on. Beil ring neck, I put it back, but no lock, not like yours, and so to door. Dot Missis Underwood she der. Den you came, den no chance since to feex. Oh, I so sorry. Don't send me to jail. Oh—"

Twenty young women of the city have gone into training for war service in a class of automobile repairing which is being directed by J. W. Davis, of the high school. The object of the course, which includes lessons in fit girls to take jobs that may soon be left vacant by men who will leave for the service. Some knowledge of driving and the mechanism of automobiles is necessary, of course, for entrance to the training class, but the course, itself, is a general working over of the ways to repair a car and a discussion of automobile "difficulties" and the actual repair of them.

The schedule for the county home economics demonstration for the rest of the week is as follows: Thursday, at the Ardmore Home Economics club. Friday at the Portage school.

A demonstration will be given by Miss Ogle before the Lafayette Parent-Teachers' association Friday afternoon.

Miss Miriam Beall, food expert sent out from Purdue on special work, will be in the city to work with Miss Ogle on Monday and Tuesday, May 13 and 14. On Monday afternoon she will give a cottage cheese demonstration at the Studebaker school, which will be free and public to everybody. On Tuesday night the Auten Relief corps will give a free public demonstration, with Miss Beall in charge. Everyone is urged to attend one or both of these meetings for Miss Beall has many interesting and helpful things to tell housewives about the use of cottage cheese.

Trinity M. E. Red Cross auxiliary, No. 54, will meet with Mrs. W. H. Hillman, 1043 Portage av., Thursday afternoon.

Beginning Thursday of this week, members of the Progress club Red Cross auxiliary, No. 23, will meet on Thursdays at 2 o'clock in the club rooms instead of on Saturdays. This will continue during the summer months.

Burns auxiliary, No. 54 of the Trinity M. E. church will meet Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. W. H. Hillman, 1043 Portage av.
