How to Teach Political Economy

in the Lyceum Institute.

Political Economy is one of the most important branches of study, because it covers the most practical relations of life. How to obtain subsistence for the body and the means of comfort for the household is the first question that concerns the mass of men, and ought to be the first question with every young person. No one ought to consider his father rich enough to first efforts of his early mannood to the purpose of obtaining a living.

In making this statement we have raised a question in Morals as well as in Political Economy. The ethical principle alluded to is the obligation of every one to obtain the means of support by his own efforts. It shows that Political Economy can not be divorced from Moral Science, though authors have generally treated it as a branch of knowledge having exclusive reference to the system of things as it is, and not as it should be. It may be very comfortable for those who get their support and heap up fortunes out of others to have Economy divorced from Ethics; but the mass of mankind, being compelled to labor in the production of wealth, can not long study Politi-cal Economy without finding a mystery in the fact that some get $100 per day for doing nothing, while others get but a dollar, two dollars, or three dollars per day by hard work; and they will inevitably demand the how and the wherefore of this great difference. They will even demand to be informed by what principle an able bodied and able minded man rightfully gets so much doing nothing except frolic life away in luxury, while others, who may not be to able either in body or mind, get so small a reward for pard toil all the day and incessand rest for weary muscles and aching bones dur-ing the whole night, leaving no time or meast

Ethical questions, however, would be raise incidentally in teaching Political Economy. Primarily, this science treats of the Produc-tion, Distribution, Consumption and Exchange of wealth. Labor, Land Capital and Skill are chiefly concerned in the production of wealth. The Distribution of wealth is into Wagos, Rents and Profits, while the support of the posple, the government, education, religion, luxury, &c., comprises the Consumption of wealth. The Exchange of wealt sy involves Commerce, including barter and buying and selting by means of a medium catled money, transportation by land and sea, and raises all the questioes concerning currency, values, &c.

What science, therefore, covers so many of the fundamental interests of mankind as Political Economy? And when it is considered that the people must be fed and clothed before anything can be accomplished by education, religion, art or general culture, why does not Political Economy very properly claim the first and most searching attention of the schools and of all educators in whatever capa-

It will be so considered in the Lyceum Instinte; and also in the Lyceum University, which will be the Institute extended to univerwhich will be the Institute extended to univer-sai learning, and properties of teaching this science in the Lyceum Institute and Univer-sity? It will be quite different from that usually pursued. We find a certain text book with questions at the foot of each page or in an unpendix, the answers to which are often use appendix, the answers to which are often mechanically learned, and mechanically used by azy or ignorant professors in conducting an automatic recitation. An ingenious Frenchman or Yankee might make an automatic professor and an automatic class, and by winding them up like a clock they would perform the whole process of recitation according to the standard of perfection erected by such text-

In colleges and universities, some pretensions, the professor gives lectures on this science, though he follows the most approved text-book. The lecturer sometimes canvasses the opinions of the most distinguished authors on each topic, but the utmost of his thought is to ba ance authorities and give the class the doctrine as settled by the ma ority or by the author who has obtained the most general approval and applause. As usually taught, this science often amounts to nothing of any value to the student, while n some cases time and money, though not alogether thrown away, are not made half as productive in learning as they would be under better method.

The Lyceum method can be fully understood by a single illustration. Suppose we are en-tering upon the topic of Labor as an element of production. The Professor gives a lecture chiefly for the purpose of showing the class how to investigate it for themselves. He then assigns the leading authors to the members of the class; to one, Adam Smith's Wealth of Nations, to acother, Say's Work, to another, Sismondi, to a fourth, Senator Tracey, to a fifth, J. S. Mills' Work, to a sixth, Thornton on Labor, to a seventh, Carey, to the eighth, List, to the ninth, the Work by Horace Greeley, and so on through the whole class. Probably three days should be given to preparation for the recitation. Each one is required to condense into as brief a compass as possible the most important views and facts given by his author. and deliver his synopsis either orally or from manuscript to the class. Three days are given to the preparation, and the regitation occupies half a day; the same topic to be continued antil thoroughly mastered by the class. Most of all, the students are urged to have opinions of

So, also, when the subject of Money and Banking comes up, it is investigated in the same way. The authors are distributed to the class, and all views that have been urged are brought under consideration. The professor introduces it with a lecture in which he explains the function of money, the different kinds of money, such as metalic, mixed and paper, the nature of banking, the experience of nations with the different currencies, &c., thus enabling the students to search the an thors to the best advantage. After three days preparation, with several other studies on hand, and half a day's recitation, the class will find all the fog that hangs between the subject and the vision of the people dispelled, and the comfort of a lifetime of intelligence on this subject, so dark to nearly all the people, is se-

So of every other topic in this seie addition, it is seen that the students have practical composition, oral speech, gram rhetoric, independent thought and free di sion while learning Political Economy. The superiority of the Lyceum Method in therefore, clear enough. The wonder is that it has not, long since, been generally adopted. L. A. HINE,
