

'TANLAC SIMPLY MADE ME OVER' SAYS RYALS

Health Shattered by Service Overseas, Ex-Soldier Says Master Medicine Has Restored Him to Splendid Condition Again.

"It was my mother who persuaded me to try Tanlac and when I took her advice it was certainly one of the best things I ever did in my life," said Robert R. Ryals, ex-soldier, residing at 1148 West Seventh Street, Des Moines, Iowa.

"Ever since I returned from France I have been in bad health. Due to irregular hours and irregular meals and the awful strain we were under over there my stomach got all out of order. I didn't care to eat much and when I did force down something it always lay heavy on my stomach just like lead. It was often hard for me to keep anything down that I had eaten and there was a bitter taste in my mouth all the time. I had sharp, piercing pains in my stomach and my heart would palpitate so bad that it nearly cut my breath off and I felt like I was choking to death. Dizzy, fainting spells often came on me and I was bothered a great deal with severe headaches. I felt weak all day long and every night I came home all fagged out.

"But I don't feel that way now for Tanlac has simply made me over again and I can say right now that it will always get a recommendation from me. My appetite has come back in full force and I can eat anything I ever could and never have a sign of indigestion afterwards. My heart never bothers me now and I can breathe as free and easy as ever. Those dizzy spells have all gone and I haven't had a headache in I don't know when. I believe I am in the best health I ever enjoyed; at any rate, I don't see how anybody could feel any better than I do."

Tanlac is sold in Keokuk by Wilkinson & Co., in Hamilton, Ill., by W. C. Hughes, and by the leading druggist in every town.—Advertisement.

Colonial.

This is the law of the Yukon; that only the strong shall thrive; That surely the weak shall perish, and only the fit survive.

This is the law of the Yukon, and ever she makes it plain: Send not your foolish and feeble; send me your strong and your sane—

Strong for the red rage of battle; sane, for I carry them sore. Send me men girt for the combat, men who are grit to the core.

Send me the best of your breeding, lend me your chosen ones. Then will I take to my bosom, them will I call my sons.

"The Law of the Yukon" from the poem by Robert W. Service, comes to the Colonial Friday and Saturday.

Grand.

The latest Cecil B. DeMille production, "Why Change Your Wife?" coming to the Grand theatre for three days commencing today, is thorough up-to-date. Even prohibition has not been forgotten by the famous producer in filming this striking story of a married life. The husband, played by Thomas Meighan, not only has a full supply of private stock in his cellar; he has even constructed a rathskeller down there. This is one of the points about which he clashes with Gloria Swanson, in the role of his wife. While she does not object to wine in the house, she maintains that a private rathskeller is carrying matters a bit too far. Their clashes grow more and more frequent, until finally the husband seeks succor in the charms of a siren, and troubles start.

Cecil B. DeMille has produced this picture with all the lavishness of detail and rare beauty that characterized "Male and Female." William DeMille furnished the story, which was adapted to the screen by Olga Printzlau and Sada Cowan. It's another bigger production. Come as early as possible; it will pay you.

Hippodrome.

A story as untroubled and free as the wide, generous Northland, where its action takes place is "The Valley of Doubt," a Reiznick picture directed by Burton George, now showing at the Hippodrome theatre. It is rapid in plot development and vigorous in pulse, and its scenery is unrivalled by any picture taken in the snow.

SICK FRIEND IS THING OF PAST

Inventor in New York Claims to Have Instrument That Will Record When Person is Telling Other Than Truth.

BY SPEECH INFLECTION

Instrument is Destined to Revolutionize Some of the Old Familiar Fabrications and Literature.

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—Oulja's rival has arrived. The little tripod that was wont to make Gwendolyn or Gertrude hold her breath while she sought answer to the question, "Who's Jack with tonight?" must look to its laurels. In the future Mrs. Maloney will have recourse to other than Oulja when she wants to know why Mike's late on pay night.

Oulja's contender for enduring fame in giving the real lowdown is a simple little instrument, the invention of an English physician. It's called the "epidiascope." And it's calculated to reach soon a state of development by which one can ask a man how he's going to vote and know whether he tells you the truth.

Records Speech Inflections.

The epidiascope records speech inflections on a blackened revolving drum in such a way that abnormalities are seen long before they can be distinguished by the trained ear of the most experienced doctor. Explaining his discovery at a recent meeting of the Royal Society of Medicine, Dr. E. W. Scripture, the inventor, said:

"When I walk through the ward of a hospital I can identify the epileptic child by its 'Good morning' greeting. During the war many men came to me with stories of fits in order to obtain certificates of exemption from service. More than one had been trained to tell a story that was typically epileptic. Although relatives and witnesses might be brought, my final judgment was based largely and sometimes entirely on the melody of the patient's speech."

Also Detects Paralysis.

The doctor's experiments on this work led to his perfecting the epidiascope. If a person is suspected of commencing general paralysis, he is asked to say, "Peter Piper's peppers." The epidiascope records the sound, and if paralysis exists in ever so mild a form the p's are sounded slightly different from one another. If the patient is normal in that respect the instrument so indicates.

Dr. Scripture adds that there are speech peculiarities for various maladies and also resulting from varying emotions—fear, excitement, enthusiasm, doubt—all of which are distinguishable and can be recorded by the epidiascope.

So when the credulous reader tells friend wife that it was the car strike that kept him late for dinner, be careful she hasn't an epidiascope hidden behind the picture of mother-in-law hanging over the mantelpiece.

SEVERAL SUITS ARE ON FILE

Loan and Building Asks to Foreclose Mortgage and Undertakers Want Accounting for Insurance Policy.

Today is the dead line for filing suits in the clerk's office at the court house, and a number of petitions are going on record at the eleventh hour.

The Keokuk Loan and Building association has brought suit against Eleanor and H. W. Thomas et al., for the sum of $615.23 which plaintiff claims is due the loan association for money defendants owe that corporation on an unpaid bond and mortgage.

A suit has been filed in the clerk's office by the Pearson, Vaughan and Holbrook undertaking establishment against Clarence J. Carr and the Prudential Insurance Company of America for the sum of $120, and for an accounting of a trust fund which is in the possession of Clarence J. Carr.

Allegations in the petition state that the plaintiff on September 7, 1919 had charge of the funeral and burial of the late James T. Carr and that they did so with the understanding that they would be paid for their work with proceeds from the insurance policy which provided for this work. The policy was with the Prudential Insurance company and this company sent the proceeds from James T. Carr's policy to Clarence Carr instead of paying it to the undertakers.

Clarence Carr was familiar with the terms of the policy and the agreement which the undertakers had to receive the proceeds of the policy in the sum of $120 for the work, but has never made any accounting to the plaintiff for the money or attempted to pay the plaintiff.

The Strause Gas Iron company has brought suit against the Fort Madison Gas Light company for the sum of $84.43 which amount the plaintiff alleges in the petition that defendants owe for merchandise which they bought in August of 1919 and for which they have failed to pay.

USE AMMONIA, SAVE CLOTHES

Small Bottle of Alkaline Solution May Save Clothes When They are Splashed by Battery Fluids.

With clothes at a hundred dollars or so a suit and shoes around fifteen dollars, it pays to be careful when you test your battery with a hydrometer or put in water. There is always a chance that a drop of the battery solution will splatter, though care in using the hydrometer may make the danger of damage extremely remote.

In case the unexpected should happen you can protect yourself if you have a small bottle of ammonia handy in the garage. If put on promptly, the ammonia may save a suit, a pair of shoes or a bad spot on the running board of your car.

Ammonia can also be used to clean corrosion from connections and battery terminals.

With service stations located as conveniently as they are in this locality the best course is to call regularly at the battery service station for testing and filling service and not only avoid the possibility of the above, happening, but also receive the experience and advice of experts whose business is to know batteries.

HOW HEARTS AND SPADES BEGAN

Playing Cards Have an Interesting History as Their Beginnings in Different Countries are Traced.

Playing cards were invented about the year 1390 in order to amuse Charles VI, then king of France, who had fallen into fits of melancholy, remarks the Philadelphia Bulletin. The inventor proposed, by the figures of the four suits or "colors," as he called them, to represent the four estates or classes of men in the kingdom.

The clergy were designated by the hearts, for which reason the Spaniards—who took the cards from the French—used instead of a heart a copas or chalice.

The nobility or the military were represented by the ends or points of spears and the Anglo-Saxon ignorance of the meaning of the figure led to the name of "spades," by which they are known to the present day.

Diamonds stood for the citizens, merchants and tradespeople—not because of any connection with the precious stones, but because the carat, the red marks as they appear upon the cards, were intended to represent the square stone tiles of which the houses of middle class were built.

The figure which we call the "club" was originally a clover leaf and alluded to the peasants and farmers. Spanish cards bear a star or baste in lieu of the French clover leaf, and it is probably because of
