NO DELEGATE FOR ALASKA THIS YEAR

Government May Help Valdez People

Alaska will not get a delegate in congress this year. A recent Washington city dispatch to the Seattle Post-Intelligencer says:

"The question of granting to Alaska some sort of representation in congress, either through a delegate or a resident commissioner, is still muddled, and there is at present little or no prospect that a solution of the problem will be found at this session of congress.

"If the senate should vote to authorize the appointment of an Alaska delegate by the president, and if the house of representatives should do the unlikely thing and pass the bill, there is no possibility that the delegate would ever be allowed to take his seat in the house," says Representative Lacey, chairman of the house committee on public lands. Mr. Lacey wants to see Alaska's interests well looked after, but he balks at the appointive delegate proposition.

"It is absurd to talk about appointing a delegate by executive authority," continued Mr. Lacey, in talking about the matter to the correspondent of the Post-Intelligencer. "It would violate the most sacred principle of our system of popular representation. The house of representatives represents the people—all of the people—through the direct expression of all of the people at the polls. The house would never send a delegate from any territory appointed by the president of the United States."

"The talk about appointing a delegate is absurd. Discuss as much as you please the practicability of electing a delegate by popular vote in Alaska; if we ever have a delegate from the territory, he will have to be elected; he cannot be appointed."

"Senator Nelson, who was a member of the sub-committee of the senate committee on territories, who visited Alaska last summer, has introduced a bill providing for the election of a delegate in the regular way. His colleagues on the committee, with the exception of Mr. Patterson, a democrat, are opposed to the measure."

A Washington dispatch of January 22 says:

Then senate committee on territories, of which Mr. Beveridge, of Indiana, is chairman, decided to adopt special legislative tactics in order to put through the Valdez-Eagle City wagon road project.

The committee voted unanimously to favorably report the Nelson bill, appropriating $250,000 for this road, and to ask its reference to the committee on appropriations.

The object of asking this reference is to have the measure put through as an amendment to the sundry civil bill, which is the greatest vehicle of miscellaneous legislation in the senate. By presenting the bill as an amendment to one of the big appropriation bills instead of as a separate measure, all doubt as to its reaching the consideration of the senate in the regular course of business will be eliminated.

Senator Beveridge, as well as the other members of the territories committee, are determined that the wagon road appropriation shall go through. So far as the development of new resources in Alaska is concerned, they regard this measure as more important than any other that has been presented this winter.

Senator Nelson today reintroduced his bill providing for the construction of roads, the establishment of schools and care of insane and destitute persons in Alaska with certain amendments. The bill, however, is practically the same as before. Each school district is to get from $300 to $1000 under the bill, instead of from $1000 to $2000, as before.

The Wrong Cochran
The attachment levied for P. E. Kern was against the property of E. A. Cochran, who was at one time employed by Mr. Kern, and not against the property of Frank Cochran, as was stated by the Daily Alaskan yesterday morning. E. A. Cochran has not been a resident of Skagway for a long time, while Frank Cochran remains a popular citizen of the city.

Will Return Home
A letter from Gov. A. P. Swineford states that he is in good health and feeling much better than when he went east. He states that he will return to Alaska about February 15.

St. Louis Street Cars Come Together In A Dense Fog and Resulting Fatalities Are Terrible—Will Investigate

[Special Dispatch to Daily Alaskan.] St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 29.—Two street cars on the Broadway line in this city came together in collision today, resulting in the loss of 20 lives, besides injuring many more. A dense fog hung like a pall over the city at the time of the accident, and it was impossible for motormen to see the track a car length ahead.

Many well known citizens of the town are among the dead and injured. The authorities will make a close investigation into the cause of the accident.
