C. B. TAPPAN,

FACTS ABOUT THE SAUSAGE.

How One of the Most Universal of Cultuary Products Is Made. What is a sausage? The principle of making all sausages is similar, and consists in simply chopping or mincing the particular kind of meat employed and seasoning it with spices or herbs of various sorts, bread crumbs, egg. salt or mustard or any of those ingredients mixed in such proportions as are agreeable. Then the whole mixture is inclosed in portions of the prepared intes-tines of a hog, sheep or calf, scrupulously washed and scraped until immaculately clean. Among the herbs employed for sea-soning are shalot, onions, leeks, sage, thyme, garlic, marjoram and parsley, and in some kinds of sausages, besides meat, anchovies, oysters and red herrings are added. Finally the blood of various animals, as the ox, pig and goose, is used, mixed with oatmeal, bread crumbs and seasoning of various kinds. These in England are known as blood puddings, but the Americans as resolutely refuse to eat blood puddings as they do to partake of the hare. Bologna sausages are shrewdly suspected to be made of the flesh of the ass, but they can be successfully imitated by making a mince of equal parts of pork. veal and lean beef.

Then there are the tasty little Lyons sausages, of which the only fault is that they are too highly flavored with garlic. The Persians made a very palatable causage of the meat of a loin of mutton, chopped up with an equal quantity of bacon or the fat of a sheep's tail. The mince meat, after being seasoned, is not stuffed into a skin, but rolled into an ovold form, round a small iron skewer and the sausages are then roasted between two banks of hot ashes, the skewer being carefully turned during the operation. The famous sausages of Mayence, in Germany, are made of pork cut into small dice and seasoned with pepper and saltpeter, and these, when filled into the skins, are smoked in the chimney for forty-eight hours over, of course, a wood fire. Germany has for centuries been the rival of Italy in the production of these historical viands. From different parts of the fatherland, and especially from Frankfort, Mecklenburg and Hamburg, come a vast variety of sausages, beginmust be fat bacon and white bread tion of bread is not much patronized by German sausage makers and it is considered to detract from their goodness. Sometimes, however, it is thought desirable to use it-first, because it renders the sausage less rich, and next because bread is allowed. In every case the mincing process is half completed .-London Telegraph.

Nailed Himself to a Post. Anson Smith, of Shelton Center, a wooden legged veteran, tells a funny story about himself. Mr. Smith set to work to make a frame for the support of his tomato vines. To keep the posts steady while nailing the slats he placed his left or wooden leg against them and next, but found to his surprise he could not move. Visions of paralysis flashed fully he found he had driven the nail through slat and post into his wooden leg, and that he was nailed fast to the tomato frame.-Ansonia (Conn.) Senti-

Familiarity Bred Contempt. The death of a fireman and the injury to an engineer who sat down on the track and were struck by a train a few track and were struck by a train a few days ago on the Chicago division of the Pan Handle shows how careless railroad men sometimes become. The same kind of an accident was narrowly averted on the Indianapolis division of the Pennsylvania a few days ago. One of the best known engineers on the division and his fireman sat down on the track while waiting for a train, and both dropped asleep. Fortunately the engineer of the mosting train saw them in time to stop, and their lives were saved.—Indianapolis News.

Nature's Pranks in Old Missouri Stories of queer happenings over the country are being reported daily, but it is hardly probable that the record of Audrian county, Mo., during the past two weeks can be beaten in any other county in the union.
