There are about ten families in Washing on who are the nucleus of the vegetarian reform theory. They got together some days ago and suggested to the executive committee of the Woman's Beneficent So ciety of the People's Church, that one of the three days' inncheons for the benefit of that church be devoted to the experiment of a vegetarian lunch. Mrs. William Tip dall, chairman of the executive committee who is a vegetarian in principle and practice, adopted the suggestion and so did the committee. Yesterday was the Vegetarian Day and as the most practical proof of the success of the experiment, the reports from the kitchen showed that nearly all the special refections had to be made over again several times so great was the demand, so large was the crowd of disciples of this in-

PROGRESSIVE

AGGRESSIVE.

These markets are both. They are progressive at all seasons, with the best and freshest goods at exclusively unequaled prices. They are aggressive in the sense of assailing high prices without impairing the value of the various articles of table supply exposed for sale. They are markets in which buyers can obtain the greatest values for least money.
