That highly respected but inconstant dame, Mistress Fortune, got mixed in her dates at the ball park yesterday afternoon and instead of rooting for the Senators actually lent encouragement to the visiting ball tossers from Baltimore. For a while it seemed as if the proverbial luck of the Senators would continue against the McGrawites, but in the seventh inning—hertofore considered as lucky only for the Washington men—the hopes of the twelve hundred or so spectators were given a sudden jolt and after the smoke of the engagement had lifted and the official scorer had secured an accurate list of the fatalities it was noted by the discerning that it was all over but the shouting and that the game might as well be called before the Manninites had the opportunity to waste any additional valuable time.

To the hardened follower of the sport it was sad to see the game swept away. Carrick was up against it all the way through the contest. He put up a fine article of ball, but for some reason the other members of the team failed to come to his rescue. It is something of an achievement to hold the strong hitting aggregation from the Monumental City down to six hits, but this feat was accomplished by Carrick, and no other man on the Manning pay roll is entitled to favorable mention even in connection with his work. There were times when Carrick's control of the sphere might have been better, but, everything considered, it was a magnificent exhibition of pitching that the local twirler displayed and had the men behind him played as fast a game as did the visitors, and if they had been able to accumulate a few more hits at opportune moments there might be a different tale to chronicle.

But we were beaten, so what's the use of dilating on the whys or the wherefores thereof? Still, there's a heap of consolation in knowing that it wasn't exactly what might be termed a walloping, for there were times when the seventh position gentlemen played like leaders, but this work was provided only in spots and soon faded out of sight.

for a brief hour and a half yesterday. Some of his work was what the ardent fan would call "yellow." Still, it was at all times decidedly picturesque, and much sport was had by those who sat directly back of the home plate by speculating as to the probable decisions on balls and strikes. Mr. Haskell apparently suffered during the major portion of the matinee with a perversion of vision, and this defect led to numerous spirited ora-

Eyes and Nose Ran Water.—C. G. Archer, of Brewer, Maine, says: "I have had Catarrh for several years. Water would run from my eyes and nose for days at a time. About four months ago I was induced to try Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder, and since using the wonderful remedy I have not had an attack. I would not be without it." It relieves in ten minutes. torical efforts on the part of the players of both clubs. One of the persons who held down a 50-cent seat in the grandstand hurled a bon mot at Umpire Haskell and that esteemed gentleman showed a keen appreciation of refined humor by shouting back, "Somebody ought to take up your pass." It was such little pleasantries as this specimen of merry persiflage that encouraged the crowd to remain until the end of the agony. Mr. Haskell, while he did not do much in the umpiring line, won a vote of thanks from the spectators by making the afternoon one of considerable enjoyment.

Major Muggsy McGraw, who has of late been endeavoring to talk himself out of the American League, was present with his young men, but remained silent during the afternoon. The few orders he had to communicate to his band were made by means of the deaf and dumb alphabet, and the crafty Muggsy took no chances on either being ordered from the game by the umpires or being set back Ho or $15 on salary day by entering into extended and heated arguments with the gentleman who get paid for standing the abuse of the baseball audiences, and to incidentally pose as deciders of plays. Dunlin, who usually trampies down the innocent daisies in left garden, cavorted in the neighborhood of first on account of First Baseman Hart being on bad terms with Mr. Ban Johnson, who is the whole thing in this league of ours, the result of a playful attempt on the part of Mr. Hart to push in the classical features of one of Mr. Johnson's umpires a few days ago. Hart's sub made a good showing, and the presence of the regular guardian was never missed.

Mr. Jordan, the new Manning first baseman, did not have any money thrown at him for good work; neither did he display any great amount of baseball erudition. He made two errors of the large and juicy variety, while at the bat he continued to push his right foot away from the rest of his anatomy whenever he tried to hit the ball, a proceeding that gave Pitcher McGinnity an inkling of what sort of balls he could not hit, and with this valuable knowledge it was not a very difficult matter to get rid of Mr. Jordan every time he came to the plate. Altogether, the work of this newest Senator was very much Hoboken.

The Washington men secured their solitary run in the second inning, when Clarke started in to pave the way for success by permitting one of McGinnity's fast shoots to hit him in the small of the back. He reached second on Dungan's hit for a base, and when Jordan was sent to first on balls, both Clarke and Dungan were pushed ahead a base. With three men on the cushions, the prospects for Senatorial scoring were brilliant. Coughlin lined the ball down to Keister at short, who retired Jordan at second and got the ball over to first in plenty of time to cut off Coughlin, but Clarke run home with the first run of the game during the play. Never again was a Washington player allowed to get across the rubber plate.

Bresnahan scored the Orioles' first tally in the third, when he hit to Coughlin, who fielded the ball cleanly and made a beautiful throw to Jordan, who let the ball pop out of his hands. McGinnity's and McGraw's outs and Donlin's hit let Bresnahan score. In the seventh, after Brodie had been retired, Jackson was given a pass to the initial sack. Bresnahan singled and then Coughlin was kind enough to make a glaring error, giving Jackson an opportunity to get home and letting McGinnity reach first. McGraw knocked out a double, sending home Bresnahan and McGinnity, and soon after McGraw cantered in on Donlin's single. These four runs proved enough to win.

This is what caused Carrick to remark "What's the use:"

Notes of the Game.

A double header will be played this afternoon with Baltimore. It is expected that Lee and Patten will do the pitching for the locals.

Manager Manning is a muchly interviewed man in these days of baseball warfare. Up to late last night no enterprising interviewer had requested a denial that the Washington manager has secured the services of Jennings, McGraw, Collins, Mathewson, Cy Young, Dasher Troy, and Terry McGovern. Will Mr. Manning please either affirm or deny the accusation?

The people of Washington are not wildly stirred up over the news that the Brooklyn team may be found fighting the Manning Senators in this city next season. What would appeal more strongly to local lovers of the game would be a team that could win a reasonable majority of its games, and permit a fan to attend a contest without fear of having to hang his head in shame when he is asked, "What was the score?" when he returns home. Washingtonians do not favor the National or the American League any more than they do the Epworth League. But they are hungry for a team that will keep up among the leaders of the procession in some league.

Foster is absent on account of the death of his father and Gear played left yesterday. The pitcher has the faculty of being able to play almost any position with more than ordinary success.

Sammy Dungan has secured a new bat and the results of its first trials yesterday were very encouraging.

NATIONAL LEAGUE GAMES.

NEW YORKS' BATTING WEAK.

The Beaneaters Win Out in the Tenth Inning.

NEW YORK, Aug. 13.—It required ten innings to decide the contest at the Polo Grounds today between the New Yorks and Bostons, the latter winning through a two-bagger by Cooley, when the bases were occupied. The New Yorks, as usual displayed a weakness in batting. Nichols held them in check at all stages. Mathewson, if anything, pitched a steadier game than the Bostonian for nine innings, but it went for naught, because of the scarcity of hits on the part of the New Yorks. The score:

JOHNSON DESIRES PEACE.

Does Not Want Any War in the Baseball World.

CHICAGO, Aug. 13.—"For sound business reasons I would like to see peace in the baseball world," said President Ban Johnson today. "The National League magnates seem to want to fix up some agreement, and Mr. Hart and I have conferred on the subject, but, of course, could not do more than talk over the situation. There are a great many things to consider and arrange, and no one can tell now what the result will be. The American League is not asking favors, and can easily take care of itself, but it recognizes the injuries which might be done to the game by some methods employed in a fight between leagues. Thus far we have respected contracts, and tried to keep the idea from the minds of the public that there was any baseball war. I am sorry to say the National League has not been so exacting in its methods."

President Hart would not say anything about his talk with Johnson, but both admit that an agreement might be fixed up this fall or winter. The two representatives of the rival leagues favor some sort of a compromise which will place baseball on a peace footing again. The stumbling blocks in the way of a settlement seem to be the disposition of star players and of the best baseball cities. All the National League magnates were to have consulted last week in New York, and have undoubtedly agreed upon what they would propose to or accept from the younger organization.

TO SUSPEND THE AGREEMENT.

The National to Make War on the American League.

NEW LONDON, Conn., Aug. 13.—James H. O'Rourke, Secretary of the Connecticut State Baseball League, has received from Nick Young a telegram notifying him that after September 30 the National agreement would be indefinitely suspended.

This is taken to mean that there is to be a war on the American League, as the National League intends to crush it, if possible. With the national agreement suspended it will be able to get players whenever and wherever possible, if they are to be had.

President Young's notification makes possible all sorts of trouble for the baseball managers, and a chance for the players to better themselves whenever they have offers. Under the agreement the manager could hold a player, and until he was released he could not do business with any other club working under the national protection.

When the agreement is suspended a man can change his job just as often as he thinks it is to his advantage and the man who hires him will not be able to help himself.

Amateur Baseball.

The Columbia Stars defeated the Young Madisons yesterday by the enormous score of 20 to 2. The losers were not in it at any stage of the game and their opponents simply kept piling up runs from force of habit. The feature of the game was the battery work of Chick and Ashton for the winners. Cokery's fielding for the losers was also deserving of mention. The victors would like to hear from all teams in the District, averaging fourteen years. Send challenges to C. M. Ashton, 2614 L Streets northwest.

The B. & O. Stars defeated the Planets after a close and exciting game, the score being 7 to 6. The timely hitting of the Stars was easily the feature of the contest. The Stars have set the pace for the amateur teams of this city, having togged themselves out with grey suits, red stockings, and red caps. Teams wishing to arrange games with the boys with the suits, send challenges to Harry Peschau, manager, 404 New Jersey Avenue northwest.

The Parsons, Va., team defeated the Arions, of this city, in two of the three games which were played by those clubs. The first victory was won by the score of 25 to 1, and the second score was 11 to 4. The third game resulted in a defeat for the Parsons by the close score of 8 to 7. Cleveland and Hofman were probably the best players on the Arion team, the latter played in the three games and had thirty-seven putouts to his credit.

The Brunswicks quit the field in Tuesday's game and forfeited to the American Stars by 9 to 0. The Stars had made twenty-three hits and nineteen runs up to the fifth inning, while the losers were trying to hit Niedfelt, the so-called "has been." The score:
