and hornless and showing the characteristic round, compact form of their sires.

As producers of milk Aberdeen-Angus cows are probably superior to Herefords, and considerably inferior to Shorthorns. They usually produce ample milk to raise a good calf, but the type, and the breeding of recent years, tends away from dairy production.

The grand champion of the Chicago International show of 1900 was "Advance," an Aberdeen-Angus, that sold at auction for $1.50 a pound, the highest price per pound for a steer on record. He weighed 1,430 pounds making the selling price $2,145.

The chief superiority of the special-purpose beef-bred animal is that he sells for more money per pound, because of his better beef-producing qualities. Most of the cattle sold for beef in the South sell for less than 3 1/2 cents a pound. The use of beef bulls alone would probably raise the price at least a cent a pound. Why not sell our feed at the best price?

"HARDEN" HOGS ON CORN.

It is not advisable to market or sell hogs right out of the field when they have been fattened exclusively, or largely, on pasture crops, such as cowpeas or peanuts. There are several reasons for this, but the chief is, that the carcass will be soft and the shrinkage too great. It is not necessary to put the hogs up in a pen or in a dry lot, but it is necessary that the greater part, at least three-fourths, of their ration be hard, dry feed. Such dry feed should constitute all, or three-fourths, of the ration for three or four weeks. If put in a dry lot, possibly two weeks are sufficient, but even if a small part of the feed be secured in the pasture, a longer period will be necessary to harden the carcass. For a short period corn alone might be fed, and if a small amount of feed is still supplied by cowpeas or peanuts, the balance may be made corn alone without any other dry feed, to good advantage. For dry lot or pen feeding, for three weeks just before marketing or slaughtering, there is nothing that will give a better carcass or produce better gains than a ration consisting of one part of cottonseed meal to three or four parts of corn.

98% of the World's Creameries Use DE LAVAL Cream Separators

Ten years ago there were a dozen different makes of creamery or factory separators in use. Today over 98 per cent of the world's creameries use DE LAVAL separators exclusively.

It means a difference of several thousand dollars a year whether a DE LAVAL or some other make of separator is used in a creamery.

Exactly the same differences exist, on a smaller scale, in the use of FARM separators. But the farm user doesn't know it. Nine times out of ten he can't tell when he is wasting $50 or $100 a year in quantity and quality of product through the use of an inferior separator.

There can be no better recommendation for the DE LAVAL than the fact that the men who make the separation of milk a business use the DE LAVAL to the practical exclusion of all other separators.

ditional observations may not be out of place:

The age to wean a colt depends largely on conditions. If the mare is not working or is not in foal again no hurry need be felt in weaning the colt, but ordinarily from six to seven months of age is not far from the most satisfactory time.

The feeding of the colt should start when it is three or four weeks old and while it is sucking the mother corn, oats, wheat bran and any good, clean sweet hay may be given. If this is done, there will be no check in the growth of the colt when weaned, but after it is deprived of its mother's milk more care must be taken in the selection of its feeds.

At least one-half the hay should be of some good legume, free from dust and sweet. The other half may be corn fodder or any good grass hay. For grain, corn, oats, wheat bran, and after it is nine months or a year old, cottonseed meal may be used. The corn should never form more than one-third the grain ration and the cottonseed meal not more than one-sixth.

Let the colt run in pasture or lot where it will get exercise, and if good growth is expected, feed during the first winter, at least, all of these feeds it will eat up clean, three times a day. Salt should be kept before the colt all the time. Ordinary salt kept in a box in the stable is probably best. If a tablespoonful of hardwood ashes be given once a day it is thought by some to do good in supplying extra material for bone-making.

Be certain to avoid allowing the colt to become infested with lice. Good, regular grooming, with a brush only, is also of much benefit.

Mississippi Berkshire Breeders' Association.

The Berkshire breeders of Mississippi are called to meet at Jackson, November 2, at 1.30 p. m., in the office of the Commissioner of Agriculture, Capitol Building.

It is important that there be a large attendance of those interested in Berkshires at this meeting. Don't forget the time and place—during the State Fair.
