Millinery Opening of Ballard Dry Goods Company.

The fall opening and display of fall millinery of the Ballard Dry Goods Co. took place Wednesday and Thursday of this week. The department set apart for millinery was arranged to display the line to its fullest advantage, and was so tastefully done as to bring forth many compliments to Mrs. Thompson and her assistants, Miss Mary McAllister and Mrs. Robinson. The stock consisted of all the latest in ladies and Misses hats and most of the creations are so choice as to make it a difficult task to make a selection. The salesladies are on hand, however, and where the customer gets into a dilemma the choice is made with that taste which characterizes this department of the store. The first day brought large crowds but the inclemency of weather yesterday prevented many from attending who had waited until the last day.

On Green or Main street between 2nd and 3rd streets, a pair of gold spectacles with different lenses, please return to this office.

Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Cunningham.

The entire community was greatly shocked Sunday morning by the announcement that Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Cunningham, wife of Rev. J. T. Cunningham, had suddenly expired at her home on Main street. Mrs. Cunningham had gotten up at the usual hour and had almost alone prepared the morning meal which was just completed when she fell and expired immediately. For several months her health had been in a precarious condition and was the source of much solicitude to her family and friends, but the end was none the less a deep sorrow and shock. Mrs. Cunningham was Miss Mary Elizabeth Heard, and was reared in Clay and Monroe counties. She became the wife of Rev. J. T. Cunningham at an early age and as the wife of a Methodist minister her home was frequently changed as the laws of the church require. In the duties which fall to the lot of an itinerant minister her husband found in her a helpmeet and companion who was a solace and a comfort under all the varying conditions that surrounded them. In his pastoral work he received that assistance which only the true Christian wife could give, and hand in hand they ministered to those among whom their lot was cast. Her life was every day a sermon from which noble lessons of self-sacrifice, untiring devotion to duty, and deep consecration to Christ were drawn. Mrs. Cunningham was the mother of eight children, all of whom survive. These are George H., Hal, Joe, J. T. Jr., and Earley, the sons, and Mrs. Hobson, Mrs. McElroy, and Mrs. Booth, the daughters. The women of the church are ministers of the Methodist church. In her home life was portrayed all the tender and motherly instincts. To her husband and her children she was devoted and each was at all times the recipient of that loving care that comes from deepest affection. In return she was the idol of her family and upon her was bestowed the tenderest love and affection by each member. She was an active worker in the church and was greatly beloved by her associates. At a recent meeting of the Woman's Foreign Mission Society one of the scholarships pledged by the congregation of her church here was named in her honor, a compliment she richly merited.

The funeral services were conducted at the Methodist church by Rev. T. W. Lewis assisted by Rev. N. G. Augustus. The remarks were devoted to the life and character of the deceased and consolation to the bereaved family and friends and the hope of a happy reunion in the hereafter. The floral offerings were numerous and beautiful, and to the children we offer that sympathy which is prompted by a long and sincere personal friendship.

On Thursday afternoon Sept. 20, Imogene Kincannon was hostess of the Verona Music club, this being the first meeting of the club since the opening of school. However despite "burden and heat" of the "Good old summer" the club met once a month with an interesting program.

Several new members have been added who were cordially welcomed. After the business of the meeting was transacted the following program was rendered: "Fly" A Southern Serenade, Mable Spencer; "The First Violet" Agnes Patterson; An original poem on music, Mrs. J. A. Orr; "Bethshens Farewell to the Piano", Velmor Gracy; "Where the Orange Blossoms grow", Sibyl Wharton; "La Paloma" Imogene Kincannon.

When the program was finished, delicious refreshments were served.

Misses Maggie Hay and Lelia Gregory were guests of the club.

A most delightful afternoon was spent and each one went home feeling that Miss Imogene was a charming hostess.

The Amende Honorable.

On the 10th day of August, 1906, while we were returning from White Springs, we met a man one and one half miles east of Guntown, about 7 p. m., who on passing our wagon, took from it a buggy whip belonging to us. We thought the man was Tom Bullard and we stated that it was him, but after hearing him make proof of his innocence we held for a meeting at Unity church for this purpose, we are convinced, beyond any doubt, that he is innocent.

We were honestly mistaken, and we regret very much that it occurred, and to set him right before the public, we desire this statement published in the Guntown Hot Times and the Tupelo Journal.
