

LAST IN CAMP AT ORANGE.

Survivors of the Army of the Potomac in Bivouac Once More.

ADDRESSES AND A PARADE.

Memories of McClellan Recalled by the Reunion Near His Old Home.

Special to the Jersey City News.

ORANGE, June 12, 1889.—The drums were beating, the brass bands were blaring and the National Guardsmen and veterans were filing past on their way home. Just in front of them, as if for them to pass under, was the grandest kind of an arch; but nobody succeeded in getting under it. It was a perfect rainbow, spanning Main street, Orange, and more or less of New Jersey. The rainbow would have been more welcome several hours earlier. As it was, it formed a pretty incident for the festivities of the twentieth annual reunion of the Society of the Army of the Potomac.

The rainbow having been late in arriving, the paraders and the decorations had a hard time of it with the rain which fell all day. But the spectators did not seem to mind the weather at all. Not only did all Orange turn out and the railroad cars deposit hundreds, but farmers from miles around drove into town with farm wagons jammed with red checked girls and boys.

THE CORPS AT WORK.

The business in the morning was the reunion of the various corps. Each one met separately, talked over ancient and modern times and elected officers. General Daniel Butterfield dragged himself from the Third Division, General Vainwright from the Second Division, General C. H. brave comrades; upon a land where liberty reigns in name and in fact; upon a people reunited, as was most beautifully illustrated a year ago at Gettysburg, when you met in fraternal intercourse those whom twenty-five years before you had met with serious ranks in civil war.

"I welcome you to our borders. I welcome you to the beautiful hills, the home where your Commander McClellan lived and died; I welcome you to the State which made him his Chief Magistrate, and which contributed many a brave boy to your ranks. Soldiers, patriots, countrymen, the State of New Jersey bids you welcome."

General Chamberlain, the president of the society, returned thanks. He added: "I want to say here today that in the dark and bitter days of 1864, when the hopes of men and women were at their lowest, when the Army of the Potomac was undergoing such sufferings and losses that it was not judged advisable to disclose them, these men of all men kept up heart, hope and loyalty to the President and the great cause. It was the moral character of these men, as well as their physical force, which made them saviors of their country."

MR. PARKER'S ADDRESS.

Will Chamberlain read a poem entitled, "Our Guests Unseen." The oration was given by General George P. Meade, George B. McClellan and U. S. Grant. In conclusion he said:

"The tendency since the war to undue centralization, and I may be permitted to add, that the trend of some judicial decisions since the war is in a similar direction, this tendency, in my judgment, is very dangerous. The doctrine of national sovereignty is necessary to the existence of the States, and the States as sovereigns are necessary to the perpetuation and the extension of that existence. Invest in the States the supreme power, and the boundaries of States, with or without their consent, and you open the door to corruption and to the most flagrant abuses of power. Wealth will be quick to use, and increase with terrible rapidity the armies of officeholders and to the detriment of the people. The ambition may seize the reins of government, and the liberties of the American citizen may be as safe as those of the Englishman, as has happened in every nation when all power was centralized."

NEW OFFICERS CHOSEN.

Portland, Me., was selected as the place of reunion next year. Major General John G. Parke was elected president of the society by a unanimous vote. General Butler, who had been supporting for the office, having sent a letter declining to be a candidate. The following vice presidents were elected: First Corps, General E. B. Fowler; Second, General C. H. T. Collis; Third, General C. H. T. Collis; Fourth, General C. H. T. Collis; Fifth, Major B. F. Rittenhouse, U. S. A.; Sixth, Colonel A. H. Barnard; Tenth, General A. H. Barnard; Eleventh, General A. H. Barnard; Twelfth, General A. H. Barnard; Thirteenth, General A. H. Barnard; Fourteenth, General A. H. Barnard; Fifteenth, General A. H. Barnard; Sixteenth, General A. H. Barnard; Seventeenth, General A. H. Barnard; Eighteenth, General A. H. Barnard; Nineteenth, General A. H. Barnard; Twentieth, General A. H. Barnard.

On the motion of Congressman Harry Bingham, of Pennsylvania, a committee was appointed to prepare a memorial to be presented to the President of the United States, for the purpose of securing the establishment of a national day of reunion, to be observed annually on the first day of June.

The rain had been so bad that the parade was postponed until the morning of the 13th. The parade was held on the 13th, and was a great success. The parade was held on the 13th, and was a great success.

IT WASN'T A GREAT RACE, BUT THE YACHTSMEN AND THEIR GUESTS HAD A GOOD TIME.

The Boats, with Gay Parties Aboard, Drifted About the Bay, but Returned in Time for a Merry Ending to the Club's Ladies' Day.

What a splendid lot of wild exhilarating sport was spoiled yesterday by the rain!

And yet, I think there is not one among the guests of the Jersey City Yacht Club who is willing to say that the Ladies' Entertainment day was by any means a failure. True, it rained, and there were only occasional suggestions of a breeze.

Hundreds of small craft anchored in the vicinity of the club's boat house, lay motionless in the dreary, foggy sky; only here and there could be dimly discerned a few slow moving yachts belonging to the club's splendid fleet of fast sailers.

But in spite of it all there were many who spent a decidedly pleasant afternoon and evening, and the rain was not so cruel as to drive the fair occupants of the various yachts below deck.

Commodore H. B. Pearson threw searching glances at the threatening sky and shook his head significantly. But he was soon prevailed upon to man the Gertrude and join those who had already ventured out and who showed no disposition to return. He took on board with him a party consisting of Mrs. William F. Brown, Mrs. C. H. Benson, Miss Gales, Mr. Fred. Langborn, Mr. C. H. Benson, and portly, good natured Steward Lieb.

On board Vice Commodore Leon Abbott, Jr.'s trim and jaunty little yacht, the Emily, with its gallant crew, were gathered a party of clever, witty and fun loving ladies. They were Mrs. Chauncey Smith, Mrs. Hermann and her charming daughter Juliet, Mrs. B. C. Johnson, Mrs. Wilson and Miss Ella Conner.

And what a time they had! How they ransacked the luxuriously furnished cabin for the fun and mystery of the yachtman's paraphernalia. They found the crackers and the canned meats, the olives, the "S. O. P." and the mirror. They discovered the like of a sailor's hats, laid aside their flower-bedecked bonnets and substituted for them the summer yachtman's head-gear—but they stood before the mirror and looked at their own reflections and they emerged from the cabin one or two hats had been converted into the most bewitching little bonnets.

On Captain John Wright's Naomi were ex-Sheriff Helz and daughter, Mrs. John Wright, Miss Helz, and the party of Groeschler and two daughters, Ella and Clara; Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Groeschler, William Groeschler and Mr. R. G. Booth. They were all very much amused by the sight of the first sailing Bessie.

On board were Miss Gertrude Rudder, Miss Elizabeth Vreeland, Miss Bessie Van Hook, Miss Messers, Miss Van Hook, Miss Van Hook, and Miss Van Hook.

There were about twenty-five and thirty yachts in the club's fleet, but some of them were left to their moorings yesterday.

Those who went out did not venture far beyond the state. As the participants returned to the club house about seven o'clock in the evening, where an excellent collation of sandwiches, coffee, cake and fruit were abundantly served, and the guests were all very much amused by the sight of the first sailing Bessie.

President John A. Hilton made the guests feel at home, and the party was all very much amused by the sight of the first sailing Bessie.
