

THE DISPUTE.

No Agreement as to the Principles Has Been Reached.

Negotiations Between England and the United States at a Standstill.

The Onus is Cast on Lord Salisbury, Who Rejected the Proposition Made by the Washington Government—Prompt Action is Urged on England

LONDON, April 22.—The Times Wednesday publishes a long dispatch from G. W. Smalley, its correspondent in America, which is devoted to dispelling the illusions that the Venezuelan boundary dispute has passed a dangerous stage...

The Times, commenting upon this, says that it can't fully share the gloomy anticipations contained in the dispatch, although the remainder is not, perhaps, untimely.

The Governor's Mansion. COLUMBUS, O., April 22.—Senator Fleischmann's bill to appropriate $120,000 for a governor's mansion, received a black eye in the house Wednesday morning.

PASSES THE SENATE.

The Rogers Bill, With Important Amendments, Goes Through.

COLUMBUS, O., April 22.—The Rogers bill passed the senate Tuesday. There were some surprises in the vote on the bill. Men who were believed to be unflinchingly opposed to it went down beneath the power that reigned supreme.

There were seven of the amendments reported to the committee. The first five were not of great importance, beyond one which has especial reference to the city of Cincinnati.

The seventh amendment provided that at the end of 25 years the municipal legislative body, or in Cincinnati the board of legislation, shall cause a readjustment of the rates of fares, car license fees, percentage, tax on gross receipts, earnings, etc.

BARON HIRSCH'S DEATH.

The Presburg Police Not Satisfied That He Died From Natural Causes—Many Menacing Letters Received by the Baron.

PARIS, April 22.—The Figaro asserts that the police at Presburg, Hungary, are not satisfied that Baron De Hirsch died from natural causes and are making inquiries into the circumstances of his death.

All of the advices received from Vienna concur in the statement that Baron de Hirsch died from syncope at three o'clock Tuesday morning, in the house of a neighbor, a wealthy land owner named Ehrnfeld.

Some of his fellow guests hearing groans, entered his room, but when they reached his bedside they found him dead.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., April 22.—I. M. Bridges, a successful farmer of Atascosa county, who has been missing for the past week, has been traced to this city, reaching here last Friday, since which time all trace of him has been lost.

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., April 22.—J. B. Shipman, of Guyandotte, claimed Wednesday that he was drugged and robbed of $200 Tuesday night while aboard a C. & O. train en route home from Cincinnati.

WHILE ALIVE

Poor, Unfortunate Pearl Bryan Was Beheaded.

This is the Testimony of Coroner Tingley and Dr. Robert Carothers.

Some Knowledge of Surgery Possessed by the Murderer—Mrs. Stanley Identifies Her Sister's Clothing, Etc.—A Dummy in Pearl's Clothing Removed.

NEWPORT, Ky., April 22.—Tuesday afternoon, as soon as the jury was secured the witness present were sworn in and cautioned by Judge Helm not to talk among themselves about the case or to others.

Coroner W. S. Tingley was the next witness called. He testified to holding an inquest on the dead body found at Ft. Thomas. The coroner described the position of the body when he arrived there.

The blood had soaked in the clothing and clots of blood were on the terrace, one large clot on top of the terrace. The head was gone. I think it had been carried away.

On viewing the stump of the neck I found an irregular cut on the back, and upon turning it over found a smooth cut. The incision was as though a clean disarticulation had been attempted.

NEWPORT, Ky., April 22.—The most damaging testimony offered Wednesday was that of Dr. Robert Carothers, who performed the post-mortem examinations. His opinion was that the girl was beheaded while she was still alive.

NEW YORK, April 22.—At the office of the Baron de Hirsch fund in this city, General Agent A. S. Solomons said that the death of the philanthropist would make no change in the administration of his numerous charities in this country.

COLUMBUS, O., April 22.—Clark's sweat-shop bill, which was defeated the other day and reconsidered, passed the senate Wednesday morning by a vote of 20 to 4 and is now a law.

looked upon her in death. She was robed in homely white. I did recognize the body as my sister's. I feel I could have fully recognized her without any marks by her limbs, her arms, her bust, her figure.

The bloody dress, the stained underwear and the other ghastly articles were spread in full view before the witness box. Mrs. Stanley leaned forward, and with wonderful composure, considering what she had suffered, she identified the blue skirt, the underwear and the green figured dress of Pearl Bryan.

Dr. Robert Carothers, who conducted the autopsies on the dead body, was placed on the stand, and testified that the body was that of a woman perfectly healthy till her death. He also testified to finding the unborn child. It was of about five months gestation, and he thought it was quickened.

Isiah Vermillion, of Greencastle, identified a handkerchief found among Jackson's possessions as one he sold Pearl Bryan by the coat mark A. C. He was not cross-examined.

CORONER TINGLEY.

The relatives of Pearl Bryan, led by the hoary father and the aged mother, had hardly taken their seats after being sworn, when Deputy Sheriff Hindman brought into court from the clerk's office and placed in front of the witness stand a lay figure dressed in the wrapper that Pearl Bryan wore at the time of her death.

The garment was a gownsome sight, covered as it was in part with the stains of mud and blood. Especially was the bodice stained heavily. Hindman placed the figure erect under Attorney Lockhart's directions and retired. Attorney Crawford sprang to his feet.

"I object," said he, "to such a display in this court."

"That is the objection?" asked the judge. "I demand that this lay figure be removed." Crawford went on "Such an exhibition is not only unseemly, but highly reprehensible. Hardly had he finished when Attorney Nelson, for the prosecution, arose.

"He objects, your honor. Of course he does," he began with warmth. "But then he would object to the introduction of any evidence which would tend to solve the great mystery in this case and fasten it on the guilty party. He would have no other reason, and it is eminently proper to have the garment shown."

Attorney Lockhart cited the Durrant case as a precedent. "I think that the lay figure should be removed," said the judge. "It is too suggestive."

The figure was then removed and the dress thrown on a table. Coroner Tingley was recalled. His examination occupied about ten minutes. He identified all the clothing that had in the meantime been placed on the table.

The clothing presented consisted of an infant style wrapper, of small pale blue check, navy blue undershirt, suit of union underwear, black stockings, shoes and rubbers, gloves and hairpins. Four valises were also put on exhibition.

Mrs. Stanley, sister of Pearl Bryan, took the stand. She said: "She was my sister. She left Greencastle on Monday afternoon, January 27. I have never seen her since alive. I saw her body a week after the following in the morgue in Newport, Ky."
