Bluffton Native Dies In Findlay

Hodgkins' Disease last week took the life of Mrs. Anna Jane Siebenaler, 28, of Edgar Ave. road, Findlay. She had been ill for the past seven years prior to her death in Findlay hospital.

Mrs. Siebenaler was formerly a resident of Bluffton, having been born here in March, 1922, the daughter of Henry and Bertha Hochstetler who survive. They moved to Findlay in 1924 from Bluffton.

She was married to Louis Siebenaler who survives along with four children, William, Raymond, Kathleen and Cheryl Lou, also two sisters, Mrs. Helen Rosenberger, Closter, N. J.; Mrs. Etha Knowles, Toledo; and two brothers, William and Dean of Findlay.

Services were held Sunday in the Trinity Evangelical church, Findlay. Burial was in Maple Grove cemetery, Bluffton.

Topsy-turvy weather continued to add to the oddities of the winter, and spoiled the Easter fashion parade last Sunday . . . one of the season's heaviest snowfalls gave a Christmas-like setting to the town and instead of verdant grass and budding trees there was a four-inch blanket of snow . . . signs of the times also included snow men and snow forts in yards as children took their last fling at winter sports . . . and a large snow rabbit in the Harry Bort yard carried out the Easter theme in a midwinter setting . . . Then one day later the mercury had climbed 47 degrees from Easter Sunday's low in the twenties, and it began to feel like spring for the first time in more than a month. . .

Dan Alspach, Bluffton dry cleaner, reminiscing this week about the times when he used to travel on the Chautauqua circuit with the Hon. Alben Barkley, now vice-president of the United States. It was back in 1926 when Alspach was one of the members of a theatrical troupe presenting the stage play, "Freckles," on a Chautauqua circuit through Iowa, Nebraska and Kansas.

Barkley, then a Congressman from Kentucky, was debating on the same circuit with another representative, Congressman Tinscher. The two attractions appeared on the Chautauqua programs on succeeding nights and they often ran into each other on the circuit, and sometimes spent as much as a day together in the same town.

Alspach recalls the congressman who was later to become vice-president as a friendly acquaintance, well-liked by everyone.

Fishermen, getting everything in readiness for the spring season, will get one break this summer through a change in the Ohio law. Since March 1, it no longer is necessary to display the fishing license in a holder attached to the hat or coat. Licenses still must be carried, but most of them from now on will be in pockets or the tackle box.

Incidentally, Riley creek which runs through Bluffton, is one of Ohio's restriction-free streams this year in a venture of the state conservation department to study the effects of not having closed seasons on fishing. None of the Ohio closed seasons or other restrictions will apply on fish taken from the Riley during the year, so local bass fishermen can continue their sport unabated when bass breeding season rolls around.

With word received here last week of the death of Frank Fenton, Clearmont, Mo., Charles Fenton, of Lawn avenue, who will be 77 years old in May, now is the last survivor of the children and grandchildren in his grandfather's family.

Frank, a native of Bluffton, who had lived in Missouri for many years, died in Clearmont Feb. 20, at the age of 79.

Razing of a barn on Alley property bought from Hiram Huser to provide space for a new warehouse being erected by the Carey Niswander farm implement and home appliance store, marked the passing of another of Bluffton's old business landmarks.

Thirty-five years ago Hawk's City Laundry, recalled now by only the old-timers, operated in the barn.

Tobacco habits change, just as everything else. A tour of downtown tobacco shops leads to the discovery that less chewing tobacco is being sold nowadays than in bygone years.

This is believed largely due to a successful campaign among wives which has made the old parlor gaboon practically a museum piece.

Snuff, surprisingly enough, continues to command a fair sale, local stores report. Although sales never have been large, the demand apparently varies little from year to year.

Do cows have a discriminating taste when it comes to music? We don't know for sure but the story is going the rounds about a dairyman in the Bluffton area who has gone into the milk business in a big way, with all the latest gadgets, including a radio, to bring soothing music during milking time, which he insists increases milk production. Everything went fine until the other night when the radio wouldn't work, so our resourceful dairyman tried the next best thing—doing the singing himself. He apparently is better at dairying than singing because he said the trial was a complete flop—at least from the milk production standpoint. The radio—and cows—both are back on the job this week.

And here comes the census—it's a good thing to count noses and Uncle Sam wants to know just how many of us there are—and like every other good thing, be sure you insist on the genuine. What we mean is, that when someone stops at your home and announces himself (or herself) as the census taker you have a right to know if it's the real McCoy.

You will know him by the big red, white and blue folder he carries. Ask to see his identification card; if he doesn't have it, don't let him in. Beware of anyone who tries to sell anything while taking the census. It's against regulations—he may be a phony.

The census taker who follows his instructions will not call at meal time—he won't smoke or chew gum—neither will he interview you in front of friends or fellow workers. What you tell him is confidential; he takes an oath of secrecy. Be cor-

Senior Class Play Cast Is Selected

Cast of characters for the Bluffton senior class play, "January Thaw," to be staged May 22 and 23, was announced last week.

Appearing in the dramatic production will be Sara Badertscher, Rosella Moser, Roderick Balmer, Mary Jean Ramseyer, Raelene Campbell, Janet Stover, Marilyn Amstutz, Kay Berry, Ada May Oyer, Dorothy Amstutz, Mary Balmer, Don Schmidt, John Bauman, Jane Risser, Lena Preto, Howard Landes, Eugene Hankish, Mickey Gleason and Kenny Parish.

W. A. Howe is directing the production.

Local Man Recovers Keys Thru D. A. V.

Gideon Luginbuhl, Bluffton, was returned a set of lost keys through the Disabled American Veterans identification system. The DAV issues a miniature license tag for key-rings, a replica of the state auto tag. Contributions in payment for the identification tag enable the DAV to return 5,000 keys a month to their owners plus maintaining free rehabilitation service for disabled veterans and their dependents.
