THE CURSE OF CALIFORNIA. California has, in her Chinese population and the prospective increase of that element of population, been called upon to deal with a problem far more perplexing than that presented to the country at large in the army of tramping idlers.

HOW A SALARY WAS RAISED. From the Chicago Tribune. A few days ago, during one of his rounds through his palatial hotel, the landlord of the Palmer house entered a room suddenly.

THE NEXT ELECTORAL COLLEGE. A few simple facts may put the political situation as to 1880 in a clearer light. The electoral college will consist of 309 votes.

California has, in her Chinese population and the prospective increase of that element of population, been called upon to deal with a problem far more perplexing than that presented to the country at large in the army of tramping idlers.

The five specifications of the congressional memorial to which more than one hundred thousand Californians have affixed their signatures, read as follows:

1. The country now being stocked with a vigorous, intelligent, progressive, and highly civilized people, there is no need of immigration of a non-assimilating and alien race.

2. That considering the character of the Chinese immigrants, in respect to their habits and modes of life and physical peculiarities, the immigration operates as a substitute for white men of the population, the question being: Shall Chinese ultimately occupy the country, or shall it be held for the homes of men of the Caucasian race?

3. There is danger of an immense increase of Chinese immigrants in the near future. The effect of the famine now prevailing in the northern provinces of China is certain to cause a migration of greater proportions than ever known in the history of the human race.

4. The Chinese bring with them habits and customs the most vicious and demoralizing. They are scornful of our laws and institutions. They establish their own tribunals for the redress of wrongs and injuries among themselves independent of our courts and subject the victims of such tribunals to secret punishment the most barbarous and terrible.

5. The system of labor which results from their presence is a system which includes all or nearly all the vices of slavery, without the conservative influence which is incident to the domestic or paternal relation between master and slave.

6. The necessary brevity of this memorial forbids the further enlargement of facts and reasons for the almost universal hostility in California to this immigration. We beg the earnest attention of the government at Washington to this subject, fraught with immense interest to us, and as we believe to the whole people of the United States.

7. Whatever the State of California may lawfully do to abate or mitigate this evil, it has resolved to do, and we, as a patriotic determination to avoid all conflict with the National authority, and to limit our action to the exercise of the police power of the State.

8. The necessary brevity of this memorial forbids the further enlargement of facts and reasons for the almost universal hostility in California to this immigration. We beg the earnest attention of the government at Washington to this subject, fraught with immense interest to us, and as we believe to the whole people of the United States.
