

MIAMI DEPARTMENT

MIAMI, eleven miles from Globe, is now the terminal of the Gila Valley, Globe & Northern railway. It has a postoffice, express office, telephone office and a three-trip-a-day train service with Globe. Three months ago Miami had one house; it now has two hundred. Miami has a population of 500. The population of Miami district is 2,000. In the Miami district are the Miami, Warrior, Inspirator, Keystone, Live Oak, Cordova, Boston-Miami, Cactus, Gibson, Duquesne, Schulte Group and Cole Deleva copper mines, with a capitalization of $30,000,000. Miami is the distribution point for these mines. The Miami mine now employs 600 men, with a monthly payroll of $75,000. The first month's freight receipts at Miami were over $40,000. Miami is growing rapidly. All lines of business are represented. It has a weekly newspaper, The Miami Messenger. Many business opportunities are still open. It is predicted that by January 1, 1911, the population will be 3,000.

interior being uncompleted, several thousand dollars were placed on deposit and a number of checks cashed. Mr. Ellery stated the business for the short time the bank was opened greatly exceeded his expectations and indicated that the Bank of Miami would receive its share of business in Miami. At present the banking hours in Miami are not fixed, but with the entrance of the Bank of Miami it is expected that the Gila Valley branch bank and the new bank will establish banking hours suitable to the needs of the public, which will be announced later. Miami now has two banks, the Gila Valley in the drug store building and the Bank of Miami opposite the postoffice.

PRESIDENT FOWLER ENTHUSIAST ON IRRIGATION

Says Congress Has Lost Its Sectionalism and Become National Factor

PUEBLO, Colo., February 9.—"When you consider that the resolutions of the national irrigation congress have been written into the statutes of the country, and its discussions have become the nation's fixed policies," said B. A. Fowler of Phoenix, Ariz., president of the national irrigation congress, "you have paid the highest tribute to the organization."

Mr. Fowler spent nearly a week here in earnest conference with other members of the board of governors of the congress, and with the Pueblo board of governors of the congress, and with the Pueblo board of control that has charge of the local plans for the eighteenth congress that will meet here September 26-30, 1910.

"There is no other organization in the country," said Mr. Fowler, "outside of the federal congress, that has accomplished the direct results to the nation that the national irrigation congress has. It is the parent of the reclamation act, that turned the national government from the skeptic to the largest proprietor and developer of and lands in the west that there is in the country. It has fostered the best industry and made it possible for the country to look forward to the time when it will produce its own annual consumption of sugar. It has led out in the forest policy, recognizing the relation between conserving the forests which in turn conserve the water that reclaims the land. It has furthered the home-making policy of the government and of the states and thereby contributed to the increased production on the land that the country's growth in population demands."

"The national irrigation congress has lost its sectionalism. It is national, and it is more than that—it is international."

Mr. Fowler, who had not visited Pueblo for many years, was much impressed with the improvement, with the energy of the city, and emphatically stated that it was a superb place in which to hold a session of the congress. Although known for years as an industrial city, Mr. Fowler saw the immense agricultural development, under irrigation, and the promise the Arkansas valley holds out for great development in the immediate future.

"I have every assurance," Mr. Fowler said as he departed for his home, "that the eighteenth sessions at Pueblo will eclipse anything in the long line of illustrious precedents set by other enterprising cities."

TRANSPORTATION IN OLD LONDON

British Customs Would Be Profitable in America

With the advent of the public motor car, which starts with an initial charge of 16 cents to cover roughly one mile of travel, the handsome cab, for a very long time the popular means of reaching a destination, has been less and less used.

To meet the new competition, 2000 handsome cabs and four-wheelers (the number, it is stated, will be increased very shortly) have been placed on the London streets in which two persons can travel a mile for 12 cents. The reduction in fare promises to a certain extent to revive the use of the handsome cab although the greater speed of the motor car is decidedly in its favor. The interesting fact is that handsome cabs and four-wheelers can be operated profitably for the very low fare of 12 cents a mile.

Nothing impresses the American abroad more than the disparity in his charges for cabs and carriages in his own and foreign countries. Low fare greatly multiplies the use, and so profit is possible. To show how common is the use of motor cabs, a paragraph appeared recently in one of the London papers stating that 1500 experienced chauffeurs were required to run new public motor cars that were necessitated by the demands of traffic.

Another feature of transportation in London to which attention can be called is the practice of designating by a number the route of an omnibus. The number consists of large numerals conspicuously displayed above the driver's seat and at the rear of the omnibus. The advantages of this simple mode of designation are quite evident.

In American cities of considerable size, there is frequently some central junction point which practically all the street cars pass. At certain hours in the morning and evening, they pass in great numbers and there is more or less anxiety and confusion in trying to determine which is the car to take. There may be several streets or places mentioned on the same car, and this may prove misleading. The uncertainty increases late at night as the traveler tries to remember the car he wishes to use.

In the London system all omnibuses traversing the same route use the same number, and it is the number almost inevitably that is mentioned when one asks which omnibus goes to a certain place. Might not the same system be adopted to very great advantage in American cities?
