WANT ORLEANS TO BE KING

Camelots Du Roi Are a Riotous Crowd of Royalists and Frequently Create Excitement in Paris.

The offshoot of the orleanist party, calling themselves the "Camelots du Roi," which every now and then get up a little excitement in Paris by assaulting ministers, would seem to be the French equivalent of our suffragettes, says an English paper.

They are supposed to be agitating for the overthrow of the French re public and the return of the Duc d'Orleans as king, but it is very doubtful indeed whether this sort of thing is likely to help the duke up the steps of a throne.

The society is composed of all sorts and conditions of men and women, from members of the old French nobility down to waiters and artisans. The Marquise de Vasselot de Regue is a prominent member, and so Count Bonin de Castellane.

The marquise is one of the "martyrs" of the cause. A few months ago she was awarded five days' imprisonment for "the use of insulting terms" and for riotous behavior at a royalist demonstration.

Nobody was more pleased than the parquise herself at the sentence. She was sentenced during her absence from Paris, but she promptly returned and was presented with sheaves of flowers by admiring royalists as she entered the prison.

Another of their little attempts to the Duc d'Orleans on the throne of France was perpetrated one dark night, when the conspirators sallied forth with pots of paint, and Paris woke up next morning, to find that a number of statues, erected to the memory of senators and other He began to take long naps and to harmless folk, had been daubed with stop scratching his head. Ended the Controversy. On the steeple of an old Universalist church in Bath, Me., there is a wooden figure of an angel. It is not a remarkably fine specimen of art, and has always been somewhat laughed about, especially because of its high heeled shoes. The Bath Enquirer re calls the story that a former pastor of the North Congregational church once accosted a devoted Universalist with the question: "Mr. Raymond, did you ever see an angel with high-heeled shoes on its feet?" 'Why, no," answered Mr. Raymond, "I can't say that I ever did; but did you ever see one without them?"
