Ooke on Hoar.

Washington, D. C. Sept. 12.—In the senate to-day the question of the Washington county, Tex., election and of the recent assassination there of Joseph Hoffman, a witness before the senate committee which had been investigating that subject, was brought up by a resolution offered by Senator Spooner, and a heated political discussion followed.

Senator Saulsbury said he regarded it as a disgrace to the constituency of the senate of the United States for the body to be converted into a political machine to advance the interest of the republican candidate for the presidency. Such investigations were got up merely for political effect, but they were a disgrace to the senate, and were responsible in every point of view for trying to keep up animosity at the south.

Senator Hoar treated the remarks of Senator Saulsbury as an unconscious admission that putting a stop to political murders at the south and the establishing of a free ballot and fair count there was to the advantage of the republican party. The senator from Delaware was quite right in that. He had no doubt that every locality in Texas where these things had happened were in the district now represented by the author of the Mills bill. The people, if there could be an honest and fair vote not interrupted by murder and violence, would by a large majority pronounce against that raid upon the industries and interest of the wage earners of the country. He denied that the outrages in Texas, Mississippi and other states were the result of race controversies, but the results of democratic efforts to maintain supremacy.

Senator Coke declared that the senator from Massachusetts (Hoar) had in a few minutes misrepresented the testimony taken more than it had been perverted in the whole discussion today. The senate had been seeking what he was utterly ignorant of. He added that the murder of young Bolton in Brenham (for which three negroes had been hanged) was a cold blooded murder perpetrated by negroes. It was wrong that these negroes were taken out of jail and hanged, but it was done because they had assisted in the murder of young Bolton. There was nothing political in it. It had nothing in the world to do with politics. Referring to Senator Hoar's remark about the Mills bill Senator Coke said Mr. Mills was able to answer for himself, and that if the senator desired to talk further Mr. Roger Q. Mills would go to Boston and discuss the tariff with him and be glad of an opportunity.

Senator Hoar asked him whether he had heard by this morning's paper that the republican party of Texas had resolved on account of violence not to put a state ticket in the field. Senator Coke replied it was a gross and palpable falsehood. There was not a republican in Texas who was not as fearless of consequences in his political and other actions as the senator from Massachusetts when he was at his home. The republicans of Texas were not putting a ticket in the field because by combining with a lot of odds and ends and isms of other politics they hoped to accomplish results which they knew they would be powerless to accomplish as republicans. The pretense of lawlessness in Texas was a fraud and sham gotten up for political purposes to gain a few votes and make a few people at home think their senators were very smart. This thing had been kept up for a couple of years to be brought up now to deceive the people, and to accomplish this the senator from Massachusetts had undertaken, as a blind, to instruct the senate that the trouble in Texas was a race prejudice. As to the tariff issue, if there was anything in this world which the average Texan would go any number of miles out of his way to kick and kill and destroy, it was the protective tariff.

At the close of Senator Coke's speech the resolution went over without action and the senate adjourned.

Foul Play.

Clarendon, Tex., Sept. 12.—Quite a sensation was caused by a gentleman driving into town about 5 o'clock this evening and stating that he had seen a dead man lying out in the open prairie about fifteen miles north of town. He says it appeared to be about 15 or 16 years old, dressed in dark gray clothes. His horse was lying close by also dead, and the saddle and bridle near as though they had been taken off and placed there. The gentleman says he did not stop to examine the body, but hurried into town to report the fact. It is the general impression that the boy is the son of C. B. Howeston, the mail contractor between Clarendon and Mobeetle. The young man left Clarendon with the mail this morning. The body is on the mail route. The officers have gone to the place, and will be back in the morning.

A CIVIL Cause Celebre.

San Antonio, Sept. 12.—In the district court to-day the suit of Elisha C. Tatum vs. A. B. Frank of San Antonio and F. A. Coleman, ex-sheriff of Kerr county, ended with a verdict of $10,769 for the plaintiff. The case has become a civil cause celebre, on account of the many delays to which it has been subjected. In 1882 Mr. Tatum was a merchant in Kerrville and was closed up, he alleges wrongfully, on attachments in favor of A. B. Frank and others, served by the sheriff. The suit was brought and Tatum got a verdict for $10,000. A new trial was granted and Tatum got another verdict for $10,000. One more new trial was granted. This time his verdict was increased to $11,769. The case will now probably go to the supreme court and will be heard from in about two years.

A Man Instantly Killed.

Pittsburg, Tex., Sept. 12.—W. G. Felton, who was known at Pittsburg, was instantly killed this morning by the bursting of an emery wheel. He was engaged in grinding a saw at his mill, about 12 miles south of Pittsburg. He was highly respected by all who knew him.

Shotgun Prohibition Society.

Aulanta, Ga., Sept. 11.—The people of Tallulah district, in which many murders have been committed, have in force a novel kind of prohibition. They met together and organized themselves into a huge prohibition society, with the social boycott as the remedy, instead of legal prohibition. Persons who show a disposition to break the rule are given such emphatic notice to leave that they make themselves scarce at once.
