Imagination to California.

We take the following apparently well considered article on California emigration, from the Shanka Courier, published in the northern mining region of that State. It will be eread with interest by those contemplating a tript to the 'far west,' or who have friends already there:

The imagination to California this year exceeds that of any year since the discovery of gold on the North Pacific Coast. The great majority of these imaginations come intending to expend their labor, at least for the first few months, in our mineral regions, and their prospects for the fall and winter is a matter of great interest. Already many have arrived, and are putting to a severe test the brilliant, and perhaps putting to a seve

Is this disappointment reasonable? Has an immense army of laboring men and women been King Jerome and his family. lured into a strange country which is barren both in health and resources? We will endeavor, briefly to make answer to these pertinent inquiries, by re-publishing a few patent and universally acknowledged facts.

In the first place, money can be readily loaned

In the first place, money can be readily loaned in California at five per cent. per month. In other parts of the world, except Australia, the same per cent. per annum is regarded as a large and lucrative interest.

In the second place, the common laborer, who, with great difficulty, and only during occasional periods, is enabled to command ten or fifteen dollars per month in other States, can here find constant employment at the handsome rate of one hundred and one hundred and fifty dollars per month. With the same expenditure of time and independent livelihood, therefore, the net profit to the common laborer is tenfold greater the receipt to the common laborer is tenfold greater the professional man, are proportionably greater.

In the third place, this state of things will continue many years. The mines of our State, which many thought would be drained of the precious metal in a few months after their discovery was announced, have been proven to be inexhaustible. The rock itself, out of which our vast months in ranges are built, seems to be enriched with gold, and a century will not be standard which prevails it, other States.

In Northern California, more, miless it be those who came to the country with the expectation of finding large inorps of pure gold upon every highway, can arge the least cause of complaint or can offer a substantial reason for disappointment. Our climate is healthy, our valleys are rich agricultural districts and our mines have, as yet, been scarcely breached. Throughout the north, there are vast districts of country, prolific in all the indications of mineral wealth, which have not yet been prospected. In view of these facts, we can unhealtatingly promise on a single state of the same and percent of the same and the proposed to the old maxim of "small provise and to the old maxim of "small provise and to the old maxim of "small provise and the same and state of the same, as we file standard which provide the price of the original.
