Honeymoon And the Doctor
Much unhappiness in marriage could be prevented and divorce rates reduced if every couple contemplating marriage would first consult a physician. The doctor can help a newly married couple by giving a thorough physical examination and check-up. This would rule out tuberculosis, syphilis and other insidious diseases that bring people much sickness and grief. Many states now require by law a Wasserman test before they can be married. This is based on proven results and need for such a test to be made before marriage. The doctor can give sound advice to those to be married about marital and sex hygiene. Feel free to discuss these problems with your family physician.
