CHRISTMAS EXERCISES.

At Mrs. F. K. Van Tassel's Primary School.

The usual program and Christmas tree were provided for the entertainment of the little folks and some of their mammas on last Friday afternoon. From the oldest to the youngest every one came off with a recitation, rendered as well as could be expected by amateurs. Then came the unloading of the Christmas tree which stood in the front room adjoining the school room. Toys and candies, tinsel and glitter, dolls and harmonicas, drinking cups and stationery outfits were brought from the branches of that little tree, which, although necessarily inexpensive proved a great light to the children. The school will reopen again at the same time as the public schools.

ADVANCE IN LUMBER

GIVES BRIGHT OUTLOOK FOR THE TRADE NEXT YEAR.

Washington Saw Mills Advance Prices to Same Basis as Those of the Oregon Association. The Increase is From one to Three Dollars Per Thousand Feet.

Changes in the list advancing lumber from $1 to $3 per thousand have been authorized, according to a prominent official of the Pacific Coast Lumber Manufacturers' association, who stated to The Ledger Monday that an advance will be made by both the Pacific Coast and the Southwestern Washington Lumber Manufacturers' association. This advance will put Western Washington lumber on the same basis as the Oregon list.

"The advance decided upon by the committee on values," said he "is entirely on common lumber and, I understand will not effect the upper grades, such as flooring, drop-siding and the like, at all. Conditions warrant this change in the list, which simply puts the list of the two Western Washington associations on the same footing with the Oregon association."

"Perhaps one of the most notable changes made is in common boards, which are advanced $3 per thousand. This brings them to $12, a price considerably different from that of a year or a year and a half ago. Dimension and timbers will both be advanced. Timbers up to 40 feet in length will go up $1, timbers from 40 to 60 feet in length $2, and timbers over 60 feet in length $3. These are the most notable advances.

"This increased price for common lumber is chiefly in anticipation of the great amount of railroad building certain to be under way in the Pacific Northwest. A year ago railroad ties could be had for about $5.50. Now they are worth about $8. Stringers have been selling this fall at about $9.50. Common dimension a year ago was on a basis of $5, and pretty freely offered at that figure. This fall it has sold at $8. Car sills were worth $8.50, and lately have been bringing about $15. Slash grain car siding was bringing about $15 or $16, and is now listed at $22, and No. 2 flooring is selling for $21, whereas it was worth about $16.50 a year ago.

"No year ever opened with a brighter outlook for Washington's greatest industry—the making of lumber—than will 1906. There is an enormous demand coming in for all kinds of lumber from all parts of the country, and there isn't a sawmill but that has orders on its books sufficient to keep it hustling for the next thirty to sixty and ninety days if it did not get another order in that time.

"Conditions which are true of Washington, however, are true with the lumber industry all over the country. Everywhere the mills are reporting an enormous demand, prices are stiff and the outlook wonderfully bright."—Tacoma Ledger.

INSURANCE GRAFT

LETTER FROM STATE OFFICIAL TO INSURANCE COMPANIES.

Deputy Insurance Commissioner Schively Demands $300 Each From Two Companies for an Eastern Junket. Does Such Acts Explain the Pernicious Activity of the Companies in Politics?

The state insurance laws of this state are supposed to be enforced by the secretary of state, who is ex-officio state insurance commissioner, and the work of that department is attended to by a deputy commissioner. The present deputy is J. H. Schively, of Olympia, who has held that office a little more than four years. In the campaign of 1900 Schively was chairman of the republican state central committee, and when the campaign was over he was given the office of deputy insurance commissioner as a reward for his service to the party.

A life insurance newspaper published in New York recently printed the following letter from an agent in Seattle: Seattle, Aug. 14, 1905.

Life Insurance Company: Gentlemen: I have been requested by the deputy insurance commissioner of this state, that it is the custom of their office to select two companies each year, transacting business in this state, to request this department to make an official examination of the companies selected. He said that if this request was made all that would be done is to visit the home offices of the companies and dine with the officials. This would enable them to officially state that they had made an examination, and eulogize the management. All this will cost is $300 for each company. The companies selected at this time are the — and the —. He also informs me that if this done in this way it will cost the company much less than to make an examination in fact. They desire to receive your invitation so that they may leave here Sept. 20. I write the above at the request of J. H. Schively, deputy insurance commissioner without comments.

Agent

When the attention of the deputy commissioner was called to this letter Mr. Schively did not deny the matter, except to say that the talk about a dinner was a joke. Continuing he said:

"It has been the custom of this office for some time to pick out several insurance companies each year, examine their securities, and ascertain if they were doing business in compliance with the laws of this state. For this the companies have paid, and the charge has been $300 each. To make a regular examination of the Woodmen of the World two years ago, and the cost to them was but $200, because there were several companies among which to pro rate the expense.

"This year we decided to look at the bonds of the Penn Mutual of Philadelphia, and the Mutual Benefit Life of Newark, N. J., and the charge against them would have been $300 each. Mr. Nichols and myself were going to New Hampshire to attend the insurance commissioners convention."

Intrinsic value and a fair price

are the watchwords that gain and hold public confidence. To tell you that we will sell you honest, up-to-date merchandise would be an offense to your intelligence. The improbability of the thing would be too apparent. To tell you that we have good, reliable jewelry to offer you at a fair price is to command that respect which is always due to a truthful statement. After all, it's the honest goods at a fair price that most people are looking for.
