Girl Stops Forest Fires DEMOS OPEN Lives on 'Top of World'

Three views which show Miss Helen Dowe, woman fire lookout, with her fire-finding binoculars, climbing the improvised stairway that leads to the "top o' the world" lookout dict the "exaggerated reports" that station, and at her location instrument.

BY MABEL ABBOTT

DENVER, Col.—(By Mail.)—This is forest-fire time. But there are no fires in the Pike National Forest; and it is largely because of a slim girl in smock and breeches.

I climbed Devil's Head to where altitude is 2,345 feet.

me awhile, but sometimes Lam alone for two or three weeks."

Miss Dowe has a good deal to do. She cooks her meals and saws and splits her own firewood. Supplies are sent from the nearest town to the foot of the trail, and she brings them up on the pack horse. Even water has to be brought up.

She has a little 22 special rifle, and knows how to use it. Mountain lions are known to be in the neighborhood, the she has never seen one. That is the life of Helen Dowe, only woman fire lookout in six states. She has studied art and was for some time head of the art department of a Denver daily. But the mountains and the forest called her; and now the accomplishment of which she is proudest is that she caught 16 fires in time last year, and has six to her credit so far this sumbass in the finest thing ever sold in a drug to the place, need Lavus, the chef, and Miss Hazel Poles, waitress, with a big six-shoot-day might entered the place, need Lavus, the chef, and Miss Hazel Poles, waitress, with a big six-shoot-day maltered the place, need Lavus, the chef, and Miss Hazel Poles, waitress, with a big six-shoot-day might entered the place, need Lavus, the chef, and Miss Hazel Poles, waitress, with a big six-shoot-day might entered the places.
