Letters from Chief Seattle

(A WEEKLY BUDGET OF MISSES FROM A FRIENDLY OLD SPIRIT)

To a Fourth Avenue Cigar Shop

Dear Leo: How come you never keep anything but Japanese safety matches? It's not only unpatriotic, but it's bad business, too. The darn things won't light. Aggravatedly yours,
CHIEF SEATTLE.

To the Weather Man

Dear Joy-Killer: Perhaps you aren't responsible for the weather, but for the love of pud, can't you induce Jupiter Pluvius to turn off the faucet once a week? Sincerely yours,
CHIEF SEATTLE.

To All U. of W. Grads

Brothers and Sisters: This is Home Coming Week. Need more be said? Certainly not. I'll see you at the big Penn State game on Saturday and at the other Friday and Saturday events.
CHIEF SEATTLE.

To Good Citizens

Dear Folks: I notice that one big Seattle firm is advertising the motto, "Washington Products Pay Washington Taxes." Another very ably stated reason why we should all buy and use Northwest products.
CHIEF SEATTLE.

To the Manager of the Restaurant Where I Ate My Thanksgiving Dinner

Dear Old Man: Congratulations! I don't know how you did it—but that frozen egg-nog had a real pre-Volstead kick to it. But why serve it only on holidays? Put it on your regular menu and the police'll have to be called out to keep the crowds out of your place. Hopefully,
CHIEF SEATTLE.

To Luther Weedon, New U. S. Commissioner of Immigration

Greetings, Friend: Big chief welcome you to Seattle. You talk little like Indian. Don't boast. Big Chief heap well pleased with you. You man who act, "Warrior who do things." Chief help you with your work. His people, Seattle people, give you support and will not be disappointed.
CHIEF SEATTLE.

To Mrs. A. Kinney

Dear Madam: I have never had the pleasure of meeting you, so it is rather bold of me to address you. But I am quite sure that anyone will tell you that I am not a masochist.

I see by the papers that a burglar invaded your home the other night—and I cannot resist the temptation to send my condolences. He did not, it is true, disturb the several hundred dollars' worth of Liberty bonds which reposed in the drawer—but, far worse, he went South with a bottle of Scotch you had unwisely left outside the safe deposit vault. Ah, madam, that was indeed a loss! Had I the pen of a Shakespeare I might indite something like this:

"He who steals my purse steals trash—
Steals something, nothing,
'Twas mine, 'tis his and has been slave to thousands.
But he who filches from me my good Scotch—"

But I am not endowed with a Shakespearean pen. So I can simply close with the hope that the thief forgot to pour off the fuel oil and had a bad head the next day. Sympathetically,
CHIEF SEATTLE.

To Burns Poe, Internal Revenue Collector

Dear Burns: I'm Chief Seattle. Truly very sorry to hear of your sudden critical illness, even if you do make me pay my income tax. I trust you will recover from your operation very, very soon.
CHIEF SEATTLE.

To the Girl at Central Who Clicks the Phone

Dear Little Operator: Don't you have any sympathy for people's ears and heads at all? Or are you just naturally malicious and antagonistic? I know one of you who takes particular delight in plugging the most terrible, thumping, ear-drum beating into your victims' heads, at moments when you're not particularly "pleased." It's brutal, woman. Someone has suggested that the victims, at the time of your displeasure, place the receiver over the transmitter, thereby sending the painful thumping back to you. I suggest that you stop the thumping.
CHIEF SEATTLE.

To Northwest Football Fans

Dear Maniacs: Are you going to see the Penn State game here next Saturday? Of course you are. You want to watch one of the finest teams in the East perform. Then perhaps you will get an idea of what kind of a team "Baggy" is going to turn out at the University next year.
CHIEF SEATTLE.

To the Public

Many a Seattle man with a full cellar has a lot of boozem friends—but it doesn't pay.
CHIEF SEATTLE.

To Movie and Pronunciation Fans

I have just seen a movie called The Shic, in which Agnes Ayres gives shric after shric. A cave man tries to slug her, but despite her wild blubber, she's all that you would call chic!
CHIEF SEATTLE.

To the Fruit Stand Men

Dear Merchants: For first class Delicious apples you charge 10 cents each. For a state that produces the hundreds of thousands of apples that this one does, and for the chief city of that state that is beginning to feel itself to be the Capital of Apple Land, isn't there something bad in this situation?

I am not necessarily blaming you. Frankly, I don't know where the blame belongs. But it is certain that the growers are not paid on any corresponding basis and it is certain that such a retail price is no good advertisement of Washington's apple industry to visitors within our gates. What do you think about it?
CHIEF SEATTLE.

To the Star-Community Chest-Mutt and Kid Parade Kids

Greetings, Papoose: Ugh, Big Chief see you leading pets in long parade line Second Avenue this morning. Make Big Chief feel fine all over. Chief doesn't want you ever grow old. When you grow big warrior, big squaw, ugh, be just as same as papoose. Big men with boys' spirit never grow old. Whole tribe honor them. Success in battle theirs, and even their enemies honor them, ugh. You be brave warriors, fight hard. Make great deeds play. Never give up, ugh. Never be discouraged. You win. Big Chief watchin' you win.
CHIEF SEATTLE.

To Wanda von Kettler

Congratulations, Wanda: You worked like a Trojan to put over the Mutt parade. Kids had heap big time. Grown folks much laughter. It was a tremendous success. Yours for a Mutt show and Mutt parade once every year.
CHIEF SEATTLE.

To Santa Claus

Dear Old Pal: You're only a month away now, and in behalf of a dozen youngsters I know about, I warn you there's some job ahead this Christmas. Toys don't count so much as food in many homes; remember that, Santa, and see that every tot gets enough to eat on that day of all days. When you slide down the chimney this year in our house, watch out for that loose brick. Last year it fell on your head and I heard what you said, and the kids did, too! Yours until Snoqualmie Falls,
CHIEF SEATTLE.

To the Barber Who Shaved Me Saturday

Dear Billy: I can't address you by your last name, because that would be advertising, and this column can't be used for such purposes. And, anyway, I wouldn't want to advertise you—not after last Saturday. Many times, Billy, you have cut my hair, and never have I been forced to find any serious fault with you. But last Saturday, when you had me down and at your mercy, your razor at my throat, you took advantage of my helplessness and poured into my ear vile propaganda that you would have never dared to mouth had I been sitting upright. It was downright cowardly! But never mind, Billy, some time you'll forget and pull some of the same stuff when I am having a haircut—and then I'll hamstring you with your own scissors. Vengefully yours,
CHIEF SEATTLE.

To Our Judges

Dear Jurists: Too many law violators appear before local courts, as elsewhere, with borrowed names. Oftentimes names of innocent persons are given by those who have no respect for law and order. These names and false addresses are published and the innocent suffer. At other times, those who mind not a little $2 to $100 fine shudder at pitiless publicity and give aliases. This isn't right. Some method should be devised to stop the practice.
CHIEF SEATTLE.

To the Auto Drivers

Dear Chauffeurs: Proceed, please, with a thought for the pedestrians. Your chauffeurs are prone to throw muddy water on the best clothes of mere walkers, and a slight decrease of speed would mean that you would be able to save them a cleaner's bill. Remember, you were once a pedestrian yourself.
CHIEF SEATTLE.

To Some Street Car Conductors

Dear Boys: Why is it that there are so many of you in a flirtatious mood when the girls cross the car tracks? It seems to be quite the thing among you to wait until the victim of your merrymaking gets right in the middle of the car tracks. Then you step on that bell and it starts such a clatter and a roar that it is enough to scare a person out of 10 years' growth. It may be the decoy of a funny game for you, but not so for the women victims.
CHIEF SEATTLE.

Asylum Probe Ends Tuesday Morning

Persons having testimony to offer concerning the insane asylums at Sedro-Wholey and Shelton are urged to be present at the final hearing Tuesday of the special committee investigating the state institutions, Robert B. Henketh, chairman of the committee, announced Monday.

The hearing will be in room 405, county-city building, and will commence at 10 o'clock. A large amount of testimony already has been taken by the committee.

THURSDAY EVENING, under the auspices of the Players' Art guild, Maurice Brown director of the Cornish Repertory theatre, will lecture at the Y. W. C. A.
