

TABLES ARE TURNED ON PRESIDENT

Many Pitfalls Now Await Harding Administration
on Second Lap

BY LEO R. SACK
WASHINGTON, March 14.—Pitfalls beset the Harding administration as it begins its second year. Instead of the enthusiasm and popularity aroused by the 7,000,000 plurality which elected the president 12 months ago, Mr. Harding is off on the second lap of his four-year term with as many tribulations as his worst political enemies could wish for him.

Here are some of the chief ones: First—Nation-wide unemployment, discontented capital and labor, disappointed and discouraged farmers, and the prospect of a big coal strike which may have serious economic consequences.

Second—Prospects of the enactment of a tariff law to shut out European goods when well-informed economists insist that the only way Europe will ever get on its feet is thru readmission to the markets of America and the world. Also prospects of the American valuation plan which threatens to arouse the enmity of the business world.

Third—The soldier bonus. Fourth—Disappointment among taxpayers over the new revenue law which has failed to meet the situation.

Fifth—Ship subsidy. Sixth—Presidential approval of the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence river waterway bitterly opposed by many groups of New York.

Seventh—Failure of the country to "get back to normalcy," combined with failure to put thru proposed reorganization of government departments and bureaus.

Eighth—From throughout the country come reports of widespread dissatisfaction with congress.

Ninth—Back fire from the seating of Newberry, insurgency within the party and growth of the agricultural blocs in house and senate.

Boy Killed by Auto Running to School

ABERDEEN, March 14.—Orville Jacobson, 7, was instantly killed yesterday when, dashing across the street in response to the school bell, he was struck by an Aberdeen Fuel company truck.

Keeping Up With Press Agent Actress Says It's "Some Job"

Miss Adelaide. With her partner, Mr. Hughes, this attractive young woman is offering one of the best dancing acts on the Orpheum circuit. They are at the Moore this week.

"Thinking up new ideas for dances, you don't talk on every subject, the harmless, necessary press agent does it for you, and then you have a difficult time trying to answer the letters besieging you with demands for beauty hints you have mentioned, or bawling you for recipes that offend the very eye of the real cook, and so the actress of today must study not only her roles and human emotions, her dancing steps and her pantomime, but she must be a walking encyclopedia, expert on beauty, fashion and cooking."

It can be done, however, for Miss Adelaide proved it, since she can gossip on a hundred different subjects, touching them lightly or earnestly, as her mood may be, but then she herself admits that she is always studying. Miss Adelaide has produced all the dancing acts in which Adelaide and Hughes have won their international fame.

"What's more," she continued, "if you don't talk on every subject, the harmless, necessary press agent does it for you, and then you have a difficult time trying to answer the letters besieging you with demands for beauty hints you have mentioned, or bawling you for recipes that offend the very eye of the real cook, and so the actress of today must study not only her roles and human emotions, her dancing steps and her pantomime, but she must be a walking encyclopedia, expert on beauty, fashion and cooking."

Mrs. Landes, Candidate for City Council, Gets Her Turn at Heckling

Mrs. Henry Landes, president of the Federation of Women's clubs and candidate for election to the city council, has learned that other little things besides street car situations and Skagit river projects are involved in politics.

Mrs. Landes and her prospective seat in the council, it happens, have been discussed by certain promising members of the rising generation, but we feel we ought to use our influence just the same. We've been lookin' over some o' these other cities and we've been findin' out about some o' these women on councils. And we've been hearin' 'bout laws'. And we aren't goin' to stand it—"

And the son of a friend of Mrs. Landes—the son being a prominent Queen Anne basketball champion—confided to Mrs. Landes that he was sorry, but he couldn't help feeling just about as the other fellows did.

"Of course," said the youth, "we aren't hardly any of us voting yet, but we feel we ought to use our influence just the same. We've been lookin' over some o' these other cities and we've been findin' out about some o' these women on councils. And we've been hearin' 'bout laws'. And we aren't goin' to stand it—"

"The blue laws," replied the opposition. "We aren't goin' to have our jazz dancing and our jazz music attacked—we aren't—"

"Oh," breathed Mrs. Landes, the dawn approaching, "so that's it. But now supposing I haven't any 'blue law' ideas. Supposing I BE-LIEVE in dancing? Supposing—"

"What's that?" the boy interrupted. "What's that?" And Mrs. Landes plained all over again.

Today the friends of Mrs. Landes are convincing the candidate that perhaps she ought to visit Queen Anne high school and others, making little campaign speeches, but not bothering to mention the street car situation and the Skagit project.
