TODAY'S PROGRAMS

STRAND—Conrad Veidt in "Above All Law."
COLUMBIA—Gladys Walton in "Top of the Morning."
BLUE MOUSE—Charles Ray in "A Tailor-Made Man."
WINTER GARDEN—Elaine Hammerstein in "The Way of a Maid."
COLISEUM—Claire Windsor in "Rich Men's Wives."
LIBERTY—Lon Chaney in "Flesh and Blood."
COLONIAL—Wanda Hawley in "Bobbied Hair."

COLISEUM

House Peters has the principal role in "Rich Men's Wives," the picture now at the Coliseum theatre. Peters' role is the sort that made the most exacting demands upon him.

Other members of the cast include Claire Windsor, Rosemary Theby, Myrtle Stedman, Gaston Glass, Mildred June, Charles Clary, William Austin, Martha Mattox, Baby Richard Headrick and Carol Holloway.

WINTER GARDEN

Elaine Hammerstein will be shown for three days as Nadia Castleton, in "The Way of a Maid," at the Winter Garden theatre.

Nadia Castleton, returning from a fancy dress ball in her costume of lady's maid, is charged by a young Croesus from the door of his apartment across the hall, with hurry instructions for bath towels. In a spirit of adventure, Nadia accepts the challenge and supplies the towels. Then complications ensue.

STRAND

Thursday is the last day of the picture, "Above All Law," at the Strand theatre. Many gorgeous scenes are shown thruout the picture. The story deals with a prince of the Orient, who seeks to cruelly punish his wife and a friend because the two had made love to each other.

Beginning Friday, Cecil B. DeMille's "Manslaughter," featuring Thomas Meighan and Leatrice Joy, will be shown.

COLUMBIA

Supporting Gladys Walton in "Top of the Morning," the Universal attraction at the Columbia theatre this week, is Harry Myers, who made such a remarkable success in "The Connecticut Yankee" and his more recent vehicle, "The Adventures of Robinson Crusoe." He is now in Europe, where Universal is filming "Ivanhoe."

BLUE MOUSE

Eddie Gribbon, who plays one of the important roles in Charles Ray's latest photoplay, a film version of "A Tailor-Made Man," now flickering on the screen of the Blue Mouse theatre, graduated into motion picture work from the field of professional sports. For seven years Gribbon played professional baseball, later serving as sparring partner for several well known pugilists.

LIBERTY

David Webster, escaped convict, the part enacted by Lon Chaney in "Flesh and Blood" at the Liberty theatre, had forced Fletcher Burton, a wealthy broker, to sign a confession that Burton's charge against Webster, which had him put in the penitentiary, was untrue. Webster knew the confession would mean the end of the magistrate and he would win his freedom. But when he learned that it would also affect Burton's son, who was engaged to his daughter, he tore up the confession and returned to the prison, knowing in his heart that "greater love hath no man."

"Ma and Pa," featuring Billy Bevan and Mildred June, and even Teddy, the dog actor, is the comedy.

COLONIAL

"Bobbied Hair" is the most beautiful, convenient and sensible style for most girls, but it will go out of style in a year or two.

These are the statements, not so contradictory as they seem, of Wanda Hawley, star of "Bobbied Hair," at the Colonial until Thursday night.

In Spain a woman's mantilla is held as sacred, and cannot be sold for debt.

Ralph Graves and Marjorie Daw, seen in the picture, play in the leading roles with Henry B. Walthall. LET WIFE DO IT
George Ade, at a dinner in Chicago, championed early marriage. "But I don't champion," he said, "such peep-of-day marriages as Henry Lytton, the great savoyard, went in for."
"Lytton, when he was 16 years old, played truant from school and married Louise Henry, who was even younger than himself."
"In the evening of the wedding day, when Lytton returned to his studies, the head master rolled back his cuffs, chose a good limber cane, and proceeded to visit condign punishment on the truant."
"Hold on!" young Lytton roared. "You can't thrash me like this! Do you know what you are doing? You're thrashing a married man!"
