BLUE TRIANGLE CAMPAIGNERS SELL $77 WORTH OF TAGS

Saturday everybody, or almost everybody, was tagged.

The Y. W. C. A. campaign, conducted under the direction of Miss Eaton, our worthy High School principal, netted the neat sum of $77.00 by the sale of tags. Early in the afternoon the workers were on the job and by evening nobody in town was overlooked, and very few refused the solicitors.

After the campaign the workers—Misses Cathrine Ray, Dorothy Lathrop, Ruth Smith, and Mary Pepper—were given a dinner at the Palm Hotel.

INTER-CHURCH WORLD PLAN

The Interchurch World Movement was organized for the purpose of cooperation. It is a grouping of missionary, educational, and philanthropic organizations within the several communions and denominational agencies. It provides opportunity for the organizations to group themselves for mutual benefit, study one another's problems and literature, and actually do something together, for example, conduct a united publicity and financial campaign.

The first call for a conference on this important idea was made in 1918 and the plan met with such instant approval that an organization was quickly perfected and the work is now being developed rapidly all over the United States. This county is to take a part in the work at the conference which will be held in the Methodist Church in Hope on Friday, April 9th.

Religion is prescribed as a cure for Bolshevism, as well as for most of the world's other present day ills by leaders in every walk of American life.

Presidential candidates, cabinet members, senators, congressmen, labor leaders, university presidents, governors, mayors and prominent business men all agree that in order to bring a return of right living and sound thinking and to check the dangerous social and economic tendencies of the times, we must have a revival of the spirit of Christianity, or, as some express it, a spiritual revival.

Attention was first called to the idea that anything as old-fashioned as religion might be the solution of a problem as new-fangled as Bolshevism by some London correspondents in the financial columns of a New York newspaper. The correspondent declared that "hardheaded business men" in England were looking either to strong governmental suppression or to a "genuine revival of religion" as the best hope of checking the Bolshevik spirit of the times.

This statement seemed so significant that S. Earl Taylor, General Secretary of the Interchurch World Movement, the organization that represents 30 co-operating Protestant denominations, with some 30,000,000 members and adherents, thought it worth bringing to the notice of a number of representatives throughout the country.

The replies received show an extraordinary unanimity of belief that in the words of an American "hard-headed business man," Charles M. Schab, "in a strong religious sentiment lies the firmest foundation for the preservation of our civilization." This opinion is shared by E. H. Gary, President of the U. S. Steel Corporation, who believes that a "genuine religious campaign is of the highest importance in combating the Bolshevik spirit." Frank A. Vanderlop prefers the phrase "spiritual revival" to "religious revival," for he feels that "it is not so much a matter of people accepting the tenets of denominational churches as it is the genuine fundamental spiritual awakening that we need."

Politically at the opposite pole from Mr. Gary, William J. Foster, of the National Committee for Organizing Iron and Steel workers, agrees with him in the fundamental proposition, with the proviso that "if the churches will get back to their primitive position of defending the interests of the weak, if they will become active and see to it that some degree of industrial justice is set up in this country—as there seems a strong tendency on their part to do—I think they may be of great service."

William Jennings Bryan is emphatic. "I have long since," he says, "reached the conclusion that the teachings of Christ furnish not a solution but the ONLY solution of the world's difficulties, and would like to see the church realize more fully the strength of the commission which it holds."

Fred Husome was up from Fargo Monday, and on returning was accompanied by Mrs. Husome and daughter, Winnifred. Fargo will be the future home of the Husome family. Mr. Husome reports being well pleased with his new location and that he has purchased a home on College Ave.

INTERESTING HAPPENINGS AT THE STATE CAPITAL

Thomas Hennessey, of Bottineau, who has lately been named warden of the state penitentiary to succeed Charles McDonald of Mandan who forcibly resigned, is eminently qualified to hold the position under the Townley-Frazier autocracy.

McDonald was altogether too friendly with Bill Langer. The story goes that a henchman of the League called on McDonald and asked for his resignation as warden of the pen. The next day a noted politician of North Dakota and Alaska (without mentioning any names) called on McDonald and asked McDonald if he could go over into Morton county and lick Langer.

"I can't," the bird tells us McDonald said.

"Why not?" the N. P. of N. D. and A. asked him.

"Because Langer is stronger over there than I am for one reason; he's a friend of mine for a second reason; and in the third place you can go to (Nome or somewhere else)," McDonald told him.

Then McDonald was really asked for his resignation.

Hennessey is well qualified. Not very long ago he was convicted for assault and paid a stiff fine.

He is at the present time sheriff of Bottineau county elected by Townley dictation.

And last but not least he had the fundamental qualifications—he is a socialist. He ran for the state legislature in 1914 on the socialist ticket (the last year socialists were socialists and before they changed the title to Nonpartisan) and as a socialist got 281 votes out of a total of 2,500 in the county.

Then too he is a great friend of F. W. Cathro's, the twelve thousand dollar and all expense director general of the State Bank of Townley-ota.

An article by James E. Boyle at one time connected with the University of Grand Forks appears in the current issue in "The Nations' Business" published at Washington, D. C., with the caption "The Drive Against Big Biz". This article deals with the Nonpartisan League and reads in part as follows:

"Jail for Liars: One of our comedians made a decided hit not many years ago with a comedy in which he told nothing but the truth. The results were appalling. Our liars took a great deal of comfort from that play—it was a vindication. It made them break out in a virtuous glow. It convinced them that they had rights."

"And now comes along North Dakota with a sinister and direct attack against this ancient human failing."

"Three state officials turned against the Nonpartisan League. They said things about that powerful organization. The Nonpartisan League legislature became duly indignant and, to put its displeasure into action, passed a law. It provided that any state official who lied about the league could be imprisoned for one year. And there is a smelling committee to watch for slips."

Other phases of North Dakota's interesting experiment are brought out by Mr. Boyle. He is especially fitted for an unbiased analysis of the League's accomplishments by study that began by inception of this remarkable organization.

Mandan Friends Give Banquet for Next Governor of N. D.

"We do not need McLauring of North Carolina, Walter Thomas Mills of New Zealand, Roylance of Utah, Eugene V. Debs or Bill Haywood of the federal penitentiary or any other imported socialist to tell us how to run our state of North Dakota. There are men in this audience, lots of men in Mandan; there are plenty of men right over there in the railroad shops who are capable of holding offices over in Bismarck and running this state; men who are honest and sincere, men who stand for justice and right; men who shoot square and are not socialists," said Attorney General Langer last evening in his brief talk at the testimonial banquet tendered him by Mandan citizens as a material evidence of their good will and backing him in his race for Governor, and of their appreciation of his fight against Townleyism.

"It is not for we lawyers to criticize the supreme court of North Dakota. Yet the supreme court, or three majority members in it, said that Langer was wrong in the Scandinavian American Bank affair. But twelve men in a jury convicted Pres. H. J. Hagen of the bank and found Langer was right. There is a higher tribunal than the supreme court and that tribunal will render its decision in June. Langer has been standing for law enforcement, for a clean state, and it was Langer who fought and fought the hardest when the socialists would destroy the sanctity of the marriage relations and home relations. Women of the state will not forget his fight and you will find the women of the state are for Langer."

Judge Hanley called first upon Judge S. L. Nichols who recalled Langer's single handed scrap for the nomination for state's attorney of Morton County and he wondered "how many of those present voted for him then." He recalled the fight Langer made against his Democratic opponent in the general election on the platform of law enforcement. "Bill Langer had the courage of his convictions. He was not then and is not now afraid to enforce the right and do the right as he sees the right."

Miss Minnie Nielson was given an ovation when she was called upon. She said: "I deem it a privilege
