LITTLE DAN CUPID

By MONA DORR.

(Copyright, 1915, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

As Sue T— sank into one of Mrs. M—'s comfortable chairs, she heaved a sigh of relief.
"Ugh! But it's great to be out here away from that dusty city."
"Isn't it nice? Herb and I are fast becoming ruralites. We love it here."
"You're happy, Belle, aren't you?" the girl asked pathetically.
"Indeed we are," Belle M— replied.
"And you, dear?"
"As happy as possible," was Sue's answer. "I've tried to become human since—since—"
"I know, my dear." Then patting the girl's shoulder, she added: "And everything will come right in time."
Sue shook her head. "He'll never forgive me for my selfishness."
"You wait and see," was Mrs. M—'s comforting reply, as Sue went upstairs to change for dinner.
The next morning at breakfast, Mr. M— remarked: "By the way, how is little Dan?"
"Mrs. B— is contemplating having the specialist out to see if there is any hope," was the answer.
After breakfast Mrs. M— made a nice custard to carry to Dan in the afternoon.
Mrs. B— was a pretty, but tired-looking woman, and had a way that pleased everyone.
"My! Won't Dan be pleased?" as

Mrs. M— passed her the delicacy.
"I know who it is, muvver," piped up a little voice from the room beyond.
"It's Mrs. M—."
"Yes, that's just who it is, Daniel, and just guess what she has brought you," said his mother.
"Let me see."
"I know, I know!" he cried. "It's tustard!"
"Right you are," laughed Mrs. M—, as she caught him up.
"I am having the specialist out next week," announced Mrs. B—.
"Oh, my dear!" said Mrs. M—, "I can only say we all hope for the best; you know we will assist you in any way possible."
Mrs. B— showed her gratefulness by a simple pressure of the hand.
The following Thursday, as Mrs. M— and Sue sat knitting in the cozy living room, the door was thrown open and, to their surprise, Mrs. B— stepped hastily in.
"Oh, Miss T—!" she cried. "I've come to ask a favor. I know you've done some nursing, and I'd like you to come over and assist Doctor B—. He's going to perform the operation."
"Doctor B—, did you say?" exclaimed Mrs. M—, as she glanced appreciatively at Sue, who, with a white face, was steadying herself by a chair. Mrs. B— nodded.
Suddenly Sue threw her head up and announced quietly: "I am glad to go if my mite may help any."
As Sue entered the chamber Doctor B— glanced up, and with surprise exclaimed, "Why, Sue—Miss T—!"
With a smile she returned. "How do you do, Doctor B—? I'm assistant nurse."
He did not reply, but commenced at once to get his instruments ready and to administer the ether.
Though the girl's heart seemed in her throat, she worked by his side, never faltering for an instant.
At last the doctor straightened up, laid down his instruments, and said: "We have done all that is possible—and I have every reason to believe it successful; but time will tell." Then he held out his hand and continued: "You have done wonderfully, and I can't express my admiration. One wouldn't think you could be so courageous."
"Not after the remark I made a short while ago," the girl replied. "But, Frank, please don't judge me too harshly. I have learned to see things differently."
The man pressed her hand, and after speaking with Mrs. B— for a moment drew her out to the car. "You need rest and quiet. I will be here next Thursday, for by that time we'll know how the boy will be."
Thursday dawned clear and beautiful, as though to herald good tidings for poor little Dan.
As Mrs. B— and Sue were busy about and trying to curb their impatience they heard the honk of a car. The next moment Doctor B— entered and, throwing aside his outer garments, went immediately to Dan's room, the women following closely.
He stepped to the bed and slid the bandage from the injured limb; the child gave a shout of joy.
"Oh, muvver, muvver! I'm all better!"
The doctor quickly slipped the bandage back in place. Turning to the child's mother, he said: "It is now safe to say, Mrs. B—, that your boy is almost entirely cured, and by careful attention you should soon have him out again."
"Thank heaven!" cried Sue fervently.
One month later Doctor B— and his wife Sue, were ensconced in their own home, with Mrs. B— as housekeeper and Dan as Sue's own especial charge.
"You may believe," Sue was saying, "that the old saying, 'One should love one's neighbor's,' is a true statement; I have learned it to my joy."
"And to think," the deep voice of the doctor replied, "that we would not be here tonight, were it not for little Dan."

"Little Dan Cupid!" said Sue, laughingly, as he drew her tenderly to him.

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

President Wilson arrived in New York July 8 on his return from France.

The German federal committee at Berlin has approved ratification of the peace treaty.

The British dirigible airship R-34 arrived at Long Island Sunday, 108 hours continuous flight from Scotland.

A Paris dispatch says Germany has indicated her desire to begin immediately her compliance with the terms of the peace treaty regarding reparations. Her request for oral conferences of German economic experts with allied experts has been granted by the allies.

U. S. soldiers are now being discharged at an average rate of 15,000 a day, a war department statement Saturday said. The grand total of discharges to date was given as 2,611, 416. Enlistments have increased sharply since July 1, the total now being more than 70,000. Nine replacement battalions of 1000 men each have been sent abroad.

The question of a permanent military policy probably will be forced before the present session of congress by Secretary Baker's order reducing the army to 233,000 officers and men by September 30. Military experts at Washington believe only the speedy passage of the army reorganization bill will prevent demoralization of the military establishment.

$325 Farm-Tractor $325

Sold on TEN DAYS' Trial with Money Back Guarantee

The "ME-GO" Tractor Attachment converts a Ford Car into the most efficient Farm Tractor ever offered. WE GUARANTEE 1,000 POUNDS DRAW BAR PULL.

In less than an hour, with only the regular Ford tools, you can change a Ford pleasure car into a practical farm tractor. In less than half an hour you can change it back from a tractor to a pleasure car. It is not necessary to even remove fenders on Ford, or alter the car in any manner, except to remove rear wheels and adjust the water connection when attaching the Dual system on motor.

The "ME-GO" Transmission Wheels contain a planetary system of gearing which employs two opposite forces in the drive wheels, one pushing and one pulling, at the same time in the same direction, thus eliminating all strain on the axle or drive shaft and practically utilizing all the power generated by the motor in direct pulling service.

GUARANTEED NOT TO OVERHEAT THE ENGINE

The Dual Cooling System, easily attaches to motor, positively giving perfect circulation and making it impossible to cause the water in the radiator to boil at any rate of speed.

The "ME-GO" attached to a Ford makes a powerful, rugged tractor capable of pulling two 14-inch plows and doing all the farm work of four to six horses.

OUR MONEY BACK GUARANTEE on a ten-day trial is positive evidence of the manufacturer's faith in the product and a forceful selling argument for the dealer.

We want responsible and aggressive dealers in every locality to represent us under exclusive territory arrangements, offering liberal discounts. Write or wire us for literature and full particulars.
