Her Supposition.

In the Beecher family the name of Mrs. Stowe was often quoted to the rising generation as one having authority. She was also quoted ad nauseam. It would seem, from a story told by the Woman's Journal. On one occasion a grandniece of Mrs. Stowe became very angry at a playmate and, stamping her foot, said, "I hate you, and I don't want anything more to do with you, nor your manservant, nor your maid-servant, nor your ox, nor your ass." Her mother sternly reproved her, asking her if she knew what she was saying.

Little Miss Beecher promptly replied, "Yes; the Ten Commandments."

"Well, do you know who wrote them?"

The child, looking disgusted, answered: "Goodness, yes. Aunt Harriet did. I s'pose."

The "Six Hundred Ruffians."

On Feb. 23, 1838, Lord Maidstone called the attention of the house to a speech delivered by O'Connell at a political dinner in London in which he asserted that the Tory election committee of the day—or the committees appointed by the house to try election petitions, a practice which has since been abolished—had stooped to "foul perjury" in order that their friends might retain their seats. A vote of censure on O'Connell, which was moved by Lord Maidstone, was carried by a majority of nine.

A few days later a curious scene was witnessed in the house. O'Connell had to stand up in his place in the crowded chamber while the speaker, James Abercromby, solemnly reproved him for "the false and scandalous imputation" he had cast upon "the honor and conduct of members of the house. It now only remains," said the speaker in conclusion, "that in obedience to the commands of this house I should reprimand you, as I now accordingly do."

The reprimand, however, made no impression upon O'Connell. "I have repented of nothing, I have retracted nothing," said he in the course of a speech he delivered when the speaker resumed his seat, and he concluded by moving a committee before which to prove his charges. He subsequently described the house of commons—in a speech delivered outside—as "six hundred ruffians."

BIG CELEBRATION FOR MAINE

American Shipbuilding's Tercentenary to Be Observed at Bath.

The three hundredth anniversary of American shipbuilding will be observed in Bath, Me., and the adjacent towns at the mouth of the Kennebec river during the week of Aug. 5 by one of the greatest celebrations ever attempted in Maine, says a Bath correspondent of the New York Tribune.

It was at Popham Beach, settled by George Popham in 1607, where colonists built the first American vessel, named it the Virginia and launched it on the placid Kennebec. In commemoration of this event the city of Bath, which since that time has become famous for the stanch ships sent out to the maritime world from its shipyards and the neighboring town of Popham, which claims the distinction of building the first vessel, will join hands in making the tercentennial an appropriately important affair.

To give the celebration something more than a local or state interest the committee in charge has solicited and obtained promise of the presence of several American and British warships and the attendance of the governors of the six New England states. The programme, which has recently been completed, will be varied. Big bonfires on both banks of the river mouth, with a display of fireworks, a great water carnival, literary exercises, with historical addresses by prominent men, civic and military parades, athletic sports, receptions and miscellaneous festivities will crowd the week.

THE SHEIK RAISULI.

Snapping his thumbs at the throbs of the drums.

Of the armies that rally to scare him, Raisuli sits calm 'neath a sheltering palm And winks at a mix in his baren.

"They're no hot on my trail that I ought to turn pale,"

He chuckles, untroubled and coolly.

"For I've studied their ire and the vengeance is dire

That they'll wreak on the Sheik Raisuli!"

Then he swings his gaunt knees with in different ease

O'er the back of a fiery stallion.

Gallops merrily forth to the sea circled north

And comes back with a captured battalion.

He proclaims what he'll do to a colonel or two

Unless they are paid for all duty.

And to get their release the pursuers must cease

To seek for the Sheik Raisuli.

The warships may roar, and a whole army may plot for his swift extirpation.

And they can't understand it because one lone bandit

Can hand them the laugh of exultation.

Though he's bold and he's bad, we could almost feel glad

If some of our warriors had truly

In the innermost parts of their battle

Scared hearts

Just a streak of the Sheik Raisuli.

—James J. Montague in New York Amer. Icon.

South Bend Range.

Like Oliver Twist, of Dickens' Fame,

He passed his plate for more;

Of biscuits crisp and coffee hot

He ate and drank two score.

At latest reports he is alive yet and doing well. His wife was alarmed and was about to call in the doctor, but when she learned that the biscuits were baked in the South Bend Malleable, now being exhibited at the store of the Lake City Hardware company every evening this week until 9 o'clock, she knew no harm could come of it. He also confessed to having drunk 16 cups of their coffee, but then, you could not blame him, for it is incomparable. The exhibit is still on, and there are enough good biscuits and coffee to go around, and still a handsome cook book and useful souvenir for everyone who visits the demonstration of the wonderful merits and cooking possibilities of the Malleable range, made in South Bend.

This range is without doubt a triumph as a modern device for perfect and economical cooking. It takes less fuel than any other range made, and because of its scientific construction, will last a lifetime. No housewife can afford to miss the opportunity of seeing this range, even though she does not contemplate buying a new one at the present time.

BEST LAND ANNEX

FIRST STOP NORTH OF WOODLAWN

To Be Opened Thursday, Oct. 31

Five months since we opened Best Land, which is now mostly all sold. All parties wishing choice of situation can obtain a number for choice by depositing five dollars at our office. Lots that we opened at Bestland at $49 to $99 have since sold for as high as $257 each, and we predict that at Bestland Annex they will do still better. For ten days after opening we will sell at our opening price, $49 to $99, a few higher, but at the end of those ten days we will positively advance every lot. Do not think we advertise this for a score head, that is most assuredly not our principle. We do mean what we say, as people know by our past dealings. We do not advertise, "Buy Now Before All are Gone," etc., "You Will Regret it if you Delay," etc., "They Will All be Sold in a Few Days," etc., "Get Busy Quick," etc.; we simply say that a word to the wise is sufficient. We are here to stay, to build and to appreciate this property. We have got the man and the money. We are not an outside institution selling here simply to profit on your investment. We do have your interest at heart, it is our home, our place, our business, and our purchasers are our folks and we do help them. This announcement is enough said.

Very Truly Yours,

THE BEST LAND COMPANY,

By its President, F. G. PARTINGTON.

DEMONSTRATION IS POPULAR

Store of Company Will Remain Open Evenings.

The Consumers company is installing a 3,000 candle power electric light in front of the Lake City Hardware company's store, which will make the evening demonstration of the Malleable iron South Bend range more attractive than ever. Beginning this evening the hardware company will serve lunch until 9 o'clock. The demonstration has proven a most popular success and the addition of the evening demonstrations the balance of the week promises to be well attended.

Fred Hunt Dies.

Fred Hunt, son of W. H. Hunt, of our city, died last night at his home in Sandpoint, having been afflicted with typhoid fever. He was about 35 years old and was formerly a Coeur d'Alene citizen, his father having platted and placed upon the market, the Hunt addition. He came here with his father about six years ago. He formerly owned property here and at his death possessed considerable at Sandpoint.

He leaves a wife and several Coeur d'Alene relatives to mourn his loss. He will be buried tomorrow under the auspices of the local I. O. O. F. lodge, of which order he was a member. The burial will occur from the N. P. depot, following the arrival of the Northern Pacific train, which brings the remains.

The lake is going down quite rapidly. It is claimed, within the last week, it has fallen fully 15 inches, which is attributed to the dam having been opened at Post Falls.

A good use for the bits of soap that accumulate on toilet stands is to dry them out thoroughly by placing on tins in the warming oven and then pounding them to a powder. Mixed with bran or oatmeal and sewed into little cheesecloth bags, they are excellent for the bath.
