NAME OF PAPER CHANGED

The name of this paper has been changed from Camas Prairie to Cottonwood Chronicle, which name it will be known by hereafter. We believe that 99 percent of our readers will favor this change, as it is shorter, easier to say and besides, the principal reason is that it proves a better advertisement for the town and community. Unless a paper takes the name of the town in which it is published, nearly everybody—except those well acquainted—must inquire where the paper is published. Very few papers can be found any more that do not carry the name of the town in their head, and in fact the citizens of a town and patrons generally insist upon this rule.

Another proof of Cottonwood's prosperity is that it is next to impossible to find a vacant house for rent—especially during the fall and winter months, when many farmers move to town for our excellent school advantages. Wherever you find a town with plenty of vacant buildings you are sure to find a poor business town that has been the victim of fake boomers and mushroom growth. However, at least 50 more dwelling houses could be rented here readily at a rent that would pay better than ten percent interest, and the wonder is that some of our capitalists do not put up a number of houses for rent. Lack of houses here for rent forces many people to move to other towns during the school months.

Every business house in any town should be represented in the advertising columns of the local paper—not alone for the benefit derived from advertising—and that the publisher needs the money—but for the benefit of the town and community in general. A country town is always judged from the appearance of its newspaper. If the paper is well patronized and looks prosperous, homeseekers and investors know that the town is a good place in which to invest and locate. If the paper has a starved appearance they know the town is no good, and pass it up and go to a more enterprising place.

An exchange suggests that since our laws or nothing else in the United States suit the I. W. W's they should all be taken out into the ocean and an island found for them to govern to suit themselves. Wrong again. They should be taken out and dumped into the middle of some ocean and let them hunt their own island. It's a sure thing they would not be satisfied with an island that anybody else would select for them.

Cottonwood is perhaps the largest and best town in the United States without a lawyer—which is sure evidence that we are a law-abiding people. Chas. W. Greenough, who practiced law here for several years, left here last June and is now practicing at Spokane in partnership with his father-in-law.

"I never saw finer fall grown anywhere in my life than they have this year on Camas Prairie—although only a partial crop." This is the report Dr. H. J. Smith brings back after an extensive business and pleasure trip through that section.—Moscow Star-Mirror.

Don't destroy the Chronicle after reading it. Send it to some friend or relative. It will save you the trouble of writing—besides help to advertise this favored portion of the country.

The Chronicle editor thankfully acknowledges receipt of a couple of complimentary season tickets, from Editor Sasse of the Enterprise, for the 3-number lyceum course to be given in the opera house at Ferdinand this Fall, under auspices of the Ferdinand Band, for which Brother Sasse is secretary and manager. Poluhni, the Magician, will appear on Oct. 10th; Musical Arts, Male Quartette, Oct. 25th; Venetian Musicians, Instrumental, Dec. 24.

Camas Prairie is noted for its big yields of fine potatoes as well as everything else that grows in the ground or on top of it. In all of our stores may be seen samples of spuds brought in by the farmers that would be sure prize-winners at any county or state fair. Some of them would fill a gunny-sack—that is, enough of them would fill a sack.

Have you noticed the fact that there has not been an explosion of a threshing machine in Latah county thus far this season? Some attribute this to the lack of smut in the grain. Others, and they are in a large majority, attribute it to the lack of I. W. W's in the harvest fields.—Nezperce Herald.

Something is radically wrong with the mail service when it takes a letter two or three days to go or come from here to Spokane or Portland. There is no reason why a letter leaving here in the morning should not reach Spokane the same day and Portland the next morning.

Russia comprises one-sixth of the earth's land surface and has a population of 182,000,000 people, representing 64 racial and tribal divisions and speaking more than 150 tongues. No wonder that it is impossible to find telephone wires in that country strong enough to stand the strain.

The published statements of our two banks in this issue indicate the splendid prosperity of the town and surrounding country. No banks in the state are in better financial condition.
