Samuel Gompers presided, and in opening, the meeting expressed the hope that a new epoch had come in the relations of labor and capital. "We want industrial peace, but not at none of the members of the board the sacrifice of any of the elements of manhood," he said. "The increased | would be called to consider the matgrowth in the organization of labor has brought greater responsibility. The work is going ahead actively, however, and we are meeting our problems in a practical way. We are dealing with living men, and living women, and living children, in the hope of better rejoicing over the hope of ultimate things for all. The laboring people release from their prison home. insist that they be regarded as something more than wage earners. They are men with rights, and hopes and aspirations and love." He expressed the belief that the plan of conciliation should be aided by every man who was against strife and for peace. He said that the unions sought to do injustice to no man, but were formed to conserve the rights of those who formed them.

Bishop Potter Talks. Bishop Potter expressed his gratification at the growth of the spirit of conciliation. He noted a growth of intelligence and open-mindedness among workmen, and said that upon it could be built the highest hope for the future. He added that at the same time there was a greater interest manifested on the part of employers in the lives and conditions of their men. He praised the humanity of American diplomacy in China, and said that it offered a splendid example for emulation. "If you rise to this opportunity," he said, "you will set the world another example that it will be your privit apparent that the acreage is fully train at Phoenix two hours and someilege to remember with pride all of equal to that sown last year. There what disarranged the programme your lives.'

Mitchell for Henorable Peace, John Mitchell said that he was for peace, because he had known the bruises of war. "The relations of labor and capital," he said, "are purely a business proposition. There is no sensiment in it. Peace is better for both; and I am for peace if we can have an honorable peace. I believe there never would be strikes if the employers and amployes could meet in fair conference. If we could have got a hearing last year the great coal strike would have been avoided." He said the public was a party to every strike, and should be consulted. He hoped that the chamber of commerce of New York would lend its mighty aid to the conciliation plan.

No Room for Strife.

Charles R. Flint, the capitalist, was humorously introduced as the walking | thrown into an old well for the purdelegate of the American Rubber company, who worked 14 hours a day. He expressed his confidence in the good that would come of closer relationship between labor and capital. He exhaustively reviewed the export trade | she had caught a glimpse of her asof the country, and the accomplishments of the skilled American labor- tify him. Views of Others. Daniel J. Keefe said that conciliation was more acceptable than arbitration, for in the latter system there had to be a decision defeating one side or the other. William H. Sayward supported Mitchell's contention that the relation of the two great industrial forces was purely of a business nature. He said the laborer did not want sympathy, but good, square treatment, and when he got it he generally returned good, square treatment. He believed that the employers should meet their men in a greater spirit of frankness.

James O'Connell said that in the metal trades employers and toilers have learned the benefits of organization and mutual concessions. He was sure the conciliation movement would do great good. Herman Justi said, in commencing: "Under the old dispensation employer and toiler sought for differences; under the new dispensation they seek points of agreement," He related the experience in Illinois with a policy of conciliation, and said that it worked excellently. "I hope this is the beginning of a great movement. Our national prosperity depends upon the steady employment of every wage earner at a decent wage, and I believe every employer in the country with a attorneys for the firm, estimate the heart in his breast or a brain in his head knows it."

Samuel Gompers, in closing, said that the thorough organization of labor presaged complete protection for the honest employer against his dishonest competitor, who "nibbled" at

"Old Glory" Greeted at a Point 1,500 Feet Under Ground-School Children Present a Gift at Wickenburg.

Phoenix, Ari., May 8 .- The presidential party spent an interesting day in Arizona. The beautiful torquoise sky, bright sunshine and invigorating air afforded the party much relief after the hot and dusty ride of Monday. The two hours in the morning at the Congress gold mine, up in the clouds of the Blu: Tank mountains, were replete with incidents and were thoroughly enjoyed. A large American flag was draped across the tunnel through which the president passed, and after he emerged he told the little group of miners who congregated about the train that he had seen Old Glory floating from tower and statehouse and warship in many different places, but that never before during his life had he seen the American flag 1,500 feet under ground.

Many of the vice president's rough riders during the Spanish war were regruited in this section, and there was much disappointment that he was not in the party. On the way to Phoenix the tire of one of the wheels of the engine tender became loose, and for the first time since the long journey began the telegrapher with the train was compelled to climb a telegraph pole to tap the wire.

Gift from Children, At Wickenburg, the scene of the recent gold mine strike, the train was halted long enough to permit the president to receive a visit from the school children. 'Ine children presented Mrs. McKinley with a cabinet of specimens. The president thanked the children in Mrs. McKinley's behalf and addressed them briefly, as follows:

"It gives me great pleasure to be received by the governor of your territory and to receive your warm welcome as we journey toward Phoenix. It is especially pleasant to meet the children, the boys and girls of the public schools. There is nothing so essential in a free government, resting upon the people, as education, and I have been glad to note that in your territory broad and ample provisions are made for education. THE EASTMAN TRIAL.

The Defendant Tells the Story of the Killing of Grogan-Declares It an Accident,

max in the Eastman murder trial was reached Tuesday when the defendant himself took the stand to tell his own story. He went into no elaborate details, but answered only the questions put to him by his lawyer. For two hours he was on the stand, giving his testimony as to his relations with Grogan and the incidents of the day of the shooting. He declared that the shooting was an accident, and that up to last October he had always believed that it was the old rim fire pistol that discharged the bullet which killed his brotherin-law. The struggle which followed, he said, was for the possession of the center-fire pistol, which Grogan had in his hand. Eastman said that he went to Grogan first to assist him and then, because of the expression on his face, to get the weapon away from him. He said that there was so much noise and confusion in the struggle that he could not recall how many times Grogan's revolver went off. But that it did go off he was almost certain. He did not know how he received his own wound, and said he did everything possible after the affair to assist Grogan to the house, and was prostrated with grief when he found that he was dying. The cross-examination was not finished when the court adjourned for

After the heated term of April weather we have some cool nights which give the tired Granger, as well as every one else a good chance to sleep. Vegitation is on the jump, crops are looking fine, corn is being planted, the man on the Garvey farm south of Le Roy has fifty acres so you can see the rows plainly across the field, this much for the cry of a late spring. The health of our citizens is good. Our street commissioner is on the "war path," has filled up some of the holes with gravel but you can hear his gentle voice growling, because he has not enough of the "love of which, is the root of all evil" so he could make our ways like unto the streets of the greater cities, but he's got to wait, so he can but let the water out of the puddles and be quiet. The stone masons have the walls of foundation for the new bank building finished with the lower joists laid ready for the brick layers.

We met J. C. Webster on the street he is arround attending to his varied interests. A movement made while he was here to obtain land for a public park which seems was satisfactoraly brought to a close, by which we will get two acres of nice dry land covered with beautiful second growth burr oaks nearly twenty feet high and so thick on the ground that they can be thined out in any style that may be desired. George L. Moore who had the misfortune a short time ago to severely cut his foot, is now able to get around sed through here yesterday, picking up old copper, rubber and trading horses.
