OLIVIER CEMETERY NO MORE

All Bodies Transferred to Metairie Cemetery Early Tuesday Morning.

Respect for the Dead.

Early Tuesday morning active work was begun in removing the remains of the deceased members of the Olivier and Duverje families from the old family burying ground, located on Opelousas avenue, bounded by Verret, Seguin and Evelina streets.

Members of the family were present to see that the remains were properly removed and an undertaker from the city was ready with the receiving wagons and proper receptacles to convey the bones and ashes of the earlier settlers of Algiers to Metairie Cemetery, where they will find their final resting place. Mr. J. Gustave Olivier, who was one of the principal movers in donating this plot of ground to the Algiers children, was present, and he superintended the removal of the remains. The Algiers people, and especially the children, will be forever grateful to the Oliviers and their connections for this grateful gift to the city, which has been dedicated for future use for playgrounds for our little children.

The city of New Orleans will erect a handsome tomb in Metairie Cemetery, which will be the receptacle for the ashes of these early settlers, and there will also be a small monument or tablet erected in the playgrounds which will commemorate the place.

On account of the buildings on the burying grounds always being kept in such perfect condition, it is not generally known by the public that it was more than a hundred years ago that the first baby was interred there. The first burial in the cemetery took place in 1805, and it was only a few weeks after that the transfer of the property was made from Louis Borepo to Bartholomew Duverje on the 9th day of August, 1805. The purchase price for all that portion of Algiers embracing all the land between the present Verret street and the upper line, now McDonoughville, was $18,000. This site eventually became the original town of Algiers. Another old landmark of the Oliviers and Duverje's was destroyed during our big fire in 1893. This was known as the old Duverje house, a counterpart of which was the Louisiana State Building at the Columbia Exposition.

Out of respect for the dead, there were no crowds allowed to gather in the vicinity of the cemetery.

CHANGES IN ELECTION PRECINCTS.

Registrar of Voters Heard sent to the council Tuesday a communication calling attention to the fact that there are thirty precincts of the city in which there are more than 400 voters. Under the law these must be reduced by division or recreation of new precincts. The registrar sent data and maps, and made suggestions as to how some of the large precincts could be reduced.

In our ward, a change of the boundaries of Precincts Four and Five, each having more than 400 voters is suggested.

The council took no action, but if it decides to make the changes suggested, will refer the matter to the city attorney to prepare maps of the changes desired and an ordinance will be introduced to authorize them.

The Orleans Levee Board Tuesday completed the appointment in the field and office forces. In some few cases the old appointees were retained.

J. H. Lewis was appointed permanent inspector of the Lower Coast levees.

WORKING FOR NAVY YARD

S. A. Trufant Receives Encouraging Advice from Washington.

Correspondence that has passed recently between S. A. Trufant, member of the naval base committee, of New Orleans, and W. H. Stayton, executive secretary of the Navy League of the United States, of Washington, indicates that an active campaign for the development of the navy yard at Algiers is being urged, with the outlook for a successful consummation of plans proposed.

In a recent letter, Mr. Trufant called Mr. Stayton's attention to the importance of recognizing the port of New Orleans and the Mississippi Valley in the distribution and building up of the smaller units.

"The Navy League must remember," wrote Mr. Trufant, "that the entire Mississippi Valley regards the navy yard at New Orleans as their own, and I am sure that in the past the unfair discrimination against this yard has been resented by the people in the valley, to the extent that it has cost previous administrations active co-operation in supporting the navy budget. It is very probable that we should today have had a much larger navy to show our power to do right and enforce peace had the two previous secretaries of the navy not treated the claims of New Orleans and the Mississippi Valley with such absolute contempt."

Monday Mr. Trufant received a letter from Mr. Stayton, executive secretary of the Navy League of the United States, which read, in part, as follows:

"I am not unmindful of the necessity for looking out for the New Orleans yard, and, of course, common sense dictates that we should endeavor to get the support of the great central valley, which is interested in that yard. I am glad to say that largely through the efforts of General Estom, a board is to be organized to determine the question of the yards which are to be developed. When that work gets under way, it will be a pleasure to co-operate with you gentlemen who make up our Louisiana committee, and you may count on us to do all that we can to get the facts before the board, and it is quite sure that many members of the board will be our old friends."

BIG IMPROVEMENTS IN GROCERY STORES.

M. Abascal & Bros. have moved bodily from the front part of their establishment to the rear, and they are having some extensive improvements made, consisting of chain wall, concrete floor, new openings, general all-around improvements which will give that corner quite an attractive appearance. The improvements here will run up to many hundreds of dollars. The store of John Kleinkemper Company, Ltd., is also now getting its finishing touch so far as the floor is concerned, and some of the openings have also been placed in position. The grocery store of Sierra Bros. has already been completed and makes quite an elegant appearance. All of these improvements add an air of sanitation which is quite appetizing to their many customers.

HOLMES EMPLOYEES ON ANNUAL PICNIC.

The 700 employees of the D. H. Holmes & Co. department store had the time of their lives at the annual picnic at Spanish Fort, Saturday. The fun began early, at 9 a. m., when the employees, headed by a band and a squad of New Orleans' "finest," marched from the store to a long string of electric cars on Liberty street, making a decidedly interesting early morning parade.

Practically every one of the 700 employees was dressed in white, while they all wore badges and carried large signs with the inscription, "D. H. Holmes, Ninth Annual Picnic." The Fort was reached at 10 o'clock and instantly the real fun of the day began. There was a scramble for the different places of amusement, while the youngsters made a rush out the pier to the bathhouse. Those who just couldn't make their feet behave were dancing in the pavilion within a short while, and it was twelve hours later before they began showing even the slightest symptoms of being tired.

Even the floor walkers lost their dignity, and gray-haired men became boys again, while the ladies of mature years were as joyful as the younger ones.

The picnickers rushing outdoor exercises developed wonderful appetites by early afternoon and the serving of dinner in Tranchina's restaurant began. Three hundred were seated at one time, and as fast as they finished, their places were taken by others.

The annual picnic was inaugurated nine years ago, the total expense being borne by the store. The store management looks upon it as the best manner in which to bring their employees in closer personal touch with each other.

To Correct Complaints

The most insidious and destructive element with which a store like this has to deal is the invoiced complaint.

If a customer has a fault to find with us, and says so, the question simplifies itself to the point of easy solution—we may adjust the wrong and fortify ourselves against a recurrence of a like mistake.

But if the complaint is invoiced, we are offered no chance to adjust the wrong, or improve our system.

We are always deeply grateful to the man or woman, who with a just complaint, gives us opportunity to right the matter—and safeguard the store against such a mistake again.

We have

presided over by a courteous young lady, who will be glad to adjust any complaint of a customer against this store.

So we hope when this store makes a mistake you will let us know—that you won't do yourself the injustice and us the injury of letting your silence take the form of the "unvoiced complaint."
