Good cooking turneth away the wrath of the overworked harvest hands.

If all unnecessary conversation was eliminated the world would be a quiet old place.

Having breakfast at 4 o'clock in the morning is a pretty good cure for city relations.

The Monday morning sun never shines with proper brightness to the boy on the farm. If a pressing need for money was all that was needed, most any of us could raise big crops. During harvest the sun does not shine alike upon the industrious man and his lazy neighbor. If you can eat watermelon without distress to yourself, then summer is the time for your delight. It takes a lot of praise to repay the tired housewife for the big dinner she has gotten up for the harvest hands. The bugs and insects which eat the crops apparently never have any holidays. They are on the job all of the

The terribly long stretch of time be tween breakfast and dinner tests the endurance of the boy during his first summer's work on the farm. Sixty million dollars were lost by

FARMERS COMBINE IN RUSSIA

Country Possesses No Fewer Than 30,500 Co-Operative Associations -Societies Loan Money.

Combined effort among the farmers of Russia though not much talked about, has nevertheless reached a high state of efficiency. The country pos sesses no fewer than 30,500 combina tions of farmers, and though the country is vast, that number of associa tions must go a long way towards covering the local areas.

There are 12,500 societies which lend money between their members; and 7,500 societies devoted to the economic distribution and sale of the crops and animals raised by associated farmers. Six hundred societies devote their efforts toward joint crop production, and in these the members are pledged to "pay in" their whole production to the society.

The establishment of 250 collective granaries, to handle the 75 million bushels of wheat produced, is an at tempt to enable Russia to compete with our Canadian elevators and may lead to the establishing of grades, a boon that Russia has not hitherto ex tended to buyers of her produce. Fin ally, there are 2,500 creameries into which dairy farmers deliver daily. It is a striking example, and one that nany people would not expect to find in a country such as Russia. All the organizations mentioned are entirely apart from the state. One of the most notable of the many ways by which the Russian goverument helps the farmer is by vance on the security of their stacked hay or grain, which enables the growover the t

The people in the South are buying large numbers of cattle, many times more than ever before. We believe they are wise in doing this, but to insure satisfactory results they should buy carefully, says Progressive Far mer. They are not likely to make any mistake in buying native or grade females and pure-bred bulls to mate with them, if they buy these at their true value, but they should not buy grade bulls, or those said to be pure-bred but which can not be registered, at any price, for breeding purposes. These bulls are worth market beef prices and no more. Nor should they pay more than grade prices for fe males "said to be pure-bred" unless genuine registration papers are deliv

AID FOR SOUTHERN FARMERS

Government Taking Steps to Fight Cattle Ticks and Boll Weevil-Study Ostrich Industry.

Never before has the southern farmer been so well taken care of by the national government as he will in the next fiscal year, according to the terms of the agricultural appropriation bill just passed by congress. When the measure was being debated in the senate, item after item was added to the bill in behalf of the southern, and especially of the cotton farmers.

An appropriation of $400,000 for the eradication of southern cattle ticks, of which sum $50,000 may be used for live stock demonstration work, in cooperation with the bureau of plant industry, in areas already freed of ticks, was one of the benefits the southern farmers received.

Included in the appropriation for investigations and experiments in animal husbandry, is an appropriation of $24,500 which may be used for the feeding and breeding of ostriches and investigations and study of the ostrich industry. This also will benefit the southern farmers and those of California.

The house provides $80,580 for investigation of the ginning, handling. grading and baling, gin compressing and wrapping of cotton and for the establishment and demonstration of standards for the different grades of This amount was increased by $100,000 by the senate, the increase to be used for furnishing the primary markets in the cotton-growing states with a set of the samples as standardized by the government, and samples of the bleached and unbleached yarns made from the different grades, showing the waste, tensile strength and bleaching quality of the cotton.

For farmers' co-operative demonstrations and for the study and demonstration of the best methods of meeting the ravages of the cotton boll weevils a total appropriation of $678,-240 was made. It was on this provision that the fight took place over the acceptance of money from John D. Rockefeller, the senate adding $300,000 to the house allowance pro vided that "no part of this sum of $678,240 shall be used in connection with any money contributed or tendered by the Central Education board. or any like organization.

Another provision which should make the southern farmers glad was that for the investigation and im provement of methods of crop produc tion under sub-humid, semi-arid or dry land condition, because as originally written, this appropriation did not contain the word sub-humid. The amount allowed for this work was $160,000. One of the provisions which was intended solely for the most opposition from the economists in congress was that of $100,000 for experiments duction in the cane sugar and cotton districts of the United States. This provision was placed in the bill at the instance of the representatives of Louisiana in the house, and later doubled to $100,000 at the instance of the two senators from that

TEACH FARMING IN SCHOOLS

Promotion of Education in Scientific Agriculture Must Be Conducted in Public Institutions.

Agricultural colleges, experiment stations, technical schools of agriculture, agricultural papers, farmers' institutes, short courses and other similar activities have accomplished much but they are now insufficient without the aid of the public schools. The study of agriculture has a distinct value as mental training which improves the quality of the school work sufficiently to justify its use even if we disregard the great value of the informationn obtained The fear that it could not be taught because it is actually being taught and very successfully in a great many places. Certain useless portions of arithmetic, grammar, physiology, and other studies may readily be supplanted by more practical work in agriculture, home-making, and other subjects relating to the every-day life of the students

In the rural schools the many things that may be done or studied include counting the stand of corn, saving and storing seed corn, corn judging, corn-testing, planter-testing, preparing the seed for the planter, the preparation of the seed bed, growth of the corn plant, processes of cultivation. the history of corn, and a study of what becomes of the corn crop, the study of weeds, the harm they do, and the means of getting rid of them. study of poultry and other live stock, and the study of the small grains.

"Crow-Headed" Hens

Hens with "crow heads"-that is, long, peaked heads, long legs and short and narrow bodies-are in the first place constitutionally weak and will never make good layers.

Appearance of Packages

The appearance of the packages has nuch to do with the attractiveness and with the sale. This is true of all kinds of foods that can be put up on the farm.

Soil Must Be Fed.

The crop must be fed just as truly as the stock. If you expect good produce from the fields there must be the nourishment from which the plant can build these harvests.

Give Stock a Variety. No single grain ration meets the entire wants of the young, growing or fattening animal. Supply a good variety to secure the best results.

Dignified Lady Thought She Was Handing Man Her Ticket, But It Was Something Else.

With an air of satisfaction, a dignified matron living on the South side settled herself in a section of the Pullman bound for Chicago-the first stage in a trip to Europe, relates the Kansas City Star. Presently came the conductor, and the woman handed him a small envelope. The conductor had grizzled hair and eyes that twinkled. He looked long and carefully at the ob ject he drew from the envelope.

"Did you think, madam," he asked. that you could ride to Chicago on this? "Why, of course I did." said the

No Longer Strain on Her Nerves For a week after Mrs. Wakefield gave her colored cook an alarm clock the family was awakened each day at 6 a. m. by the clang of its resounding bell.
