Sheridan and the Soldier.

I never heard this one of General Sheridan before. We all know that he is not a tall man. It matters not where s not a tall man. is not a tall man. It matters not where he saw the ungainly Irish soldier, huge of stature, bow shouldered and irregular of step. The General thought by a frowning reprehension to excite some-thing of martial subtiton in the man. "Don't stand that way, like a China-man doubled over a washtub," said he; tetraichten un ferm erest chest out man doubled over a washtub," said he; "straighten up, form ereet, chest out and chin elevated. Like this!" and the General, then an under officer, gave a superb illustration of the perfect soldier in parade movement, his eyes fixed unalterably away from earthly things.

"An" it's straight abid I'll be afther lookin' all th' toime!" asked the recruit, glancing down at his superior officer with a merry twinkle in his eye.

"Precisely; chest ont and chin elevated—so. Ah, very good, very good, indeed. Now you look like a soldier."

"Yes, if you mean to be a respectable soldier, certainly.

The Irish recruit puffed out like a pigeon, and as he stepped off to the measured "Right!" "Left!" exclaimed, "Well, good-boi to yes, leftenant; begorra, I'll never see you agin."—Correspondent Chicago News.

Last Winter

I had a very severe attack of inflammatory rheumstism, my feet and limbs swalled out of all proportion. I was confined to the house for several weeks and was a very great sufferer, scarcely able to walk at all. After trying medical advice and various preparations, all to no purpose, i was induced to give Hoed's Sarsaparilla a trial. I have taken two bottles, with the best results. My pains and aches have all left me, my limbs have assumed their usual proportions, and Lean right searched. me, my limbs have assumed their usual proportions, and I can truly say that I never felt better in my life than I do now. My appetite is first rate, for all of which I give credit to Hood's Sarsaparilla.—Frank-Liv B. Haren, 72 North Third St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

THE SULTAN OF MOROCCO.

An Avaricious Autocrat Who Has No Regard for His Subjects-His Dastardly Deeds of Cruelty.

inevitable. He decided that civilized ways would be inconvenient to him, and has therefore shut Morocco up as closely as he can against the encroachments of the civilized world. One year, when the country was blessed by a splendid crop of wheat, eagerly sought for by European buyers, this Moorish despot raised the export duty to such a point that the surplus grain rotted in the barns of its owners.

raised the export duty to such a point that the surplus grain rotted in the barns of its owners.

There are no rights which the people have that the Sultan respects, and Morocco is to-day, says a writer in the Cosmopolitan, one thousand years behind the times in methods and morals.

If the Sultan wants any of the property of his subjects he takes it without a moment's warning. If the luckless possessor of a good farm or a handsome horse is not willing to relinguish it at the first intimation that the Sultan would be pleased with it, he is arrested on some fictitious accusation and put to death, or at any rate whipped until he turns the desired property over to the imperial rascal, when he is allowed to go on his way a beggared man, and in all probability a cripple for life.

So keen is the scent of the Emperor and his officers after property of every wind that his audicate are universally and his officers after property of every kind that his subjects are universally compelled to live in a state of apparent poverty, abstaining from the luxuries of life not only, but even from its comforts, life not only, but even from its comforts, unless they can secure the protection of some foreign power through its consul, or ally themselves in trade with some foreigner toward whom the Sultan will not dare to use high-handed measures. Thus the merchants of Tangier, whose bazaars are full of tempting fabries, act as the resident agents of some foreign bazaars are full of tempting fabrics, act as the resident agents of some foreign house, or else are under the protection of one of the foreign consuls, each of whom is entitled by law to a certain number of proteges, or clients, among the native subjects, whose goods are thus protected from seizure.

The last Governor of Tangier was an

by the people. His wife and two children had every advantage that wealth and rank could afford. A few years ago he died, when the Sultan seized every bit of property that could be found and turned the wife and children out from under their own roof. To-day they are paupers, sleeping in the streets of Tangier and begging their bread from door to door.

begging their bread from door to door.

The Government is legally entitled to the property of any man who dies without children, the widow having no rights whatever. An incident that happened not long ago will illustrate the workings of this law. A slave, who was digging a well, was crushed by the caving in of the sides. With a chivalry in strong contrast to their financial meanness, several Moors attempted a rescue and lost their own lives in the effort. A and lost their own lives in the effort. A few hours after the accident the Govern-ment officials visited the miserable hovel of the unfortunate slave and found there a newly-born baby—born since its father's death. On the ground that the slave had no child at the time of his decease, the officers insisted upon turning the sick woman and child into the street and seized the straw bed and few worthless effects that constituted their whole property. Fortunately, there were for-eigners residing in Tangier who inter-fered and were able to delay eviction for a day or two till the mother could be turned into the street without the risk of immediate death.

A thief—not an official—is punished having his hand cut off at the wrist, by having his hand cut off at the wrist, which is plunged into a pot of boiling pitch, in order to cauterize the wound and prevent fatal bleeding. The bastinado is used on the slightest provocation. Not long ago the keeper of the prison was asked by an American traveller, whom for some reason he was anxiously to please, what this punishment of the bastinado was like. The answer was that he should see for himself. In a few minutes a man was brought in, fastened to the floor face downward, and terribly beaten upon the upturned soles of his bare feet. The screams and entreaties of the poor wretch were so heartrending that our countryman interfered and begged for mercy, when the punishment was immercy, when the punishment was immediately stopped,
"What has this man done?" said he to

"What has the the officer.

"Nothing," was the reply.

"Then what are you whipping him for?" was the amazed question, which was answered in a tone of equal aston-

"Why, didn't you ask to see a man bastinadoed!"

bastinadoed?"

They had gone into the street, seized a passer-by and severely whipped an inoffensive man merely to gratify the curiosity of an amiable foreigner.

THE SAVAGE WAY.

New the Indian Treats an Injury-0:4

The savage is emphatically the child of nature. He lives close to nature, his only aducation is gained in nature's school.

When the Indian receives an injury, he does not seek a cure in mineral poisons, but buds on the simple leaf, administers the herbel tea, and, with nature's aid, comes natural recovery.

Cur rugged ancestors, who pierced the wilterness, built their un-outh but comfortable log cabins, which in time be-ame the broad, fertile fields of the modern farmer, found in roots and herbs that lay close at hand natures potent remedies for all their common aliments. It was only in very serious cases they sent for oil addie-bags" with his physic, which quite as often killed as cured.
Latter day society has wandered too far away from nature, in every way, for its own good. Our grandfathers and grandmothers wived wholesomer, purer, better, healther, more natural lives than we do. Their minds were not filled with noxious isms, nor their todies saturated with poisonous drugs.

Is it not time to make a change, to return to the simple vegetable preparations of our grandmothers, which contained the powerand potency of nature as remedial agents, and in all the ordinary aliments were efficacious, at least harmless!

The proprietors of Warner's Log Cabin Remedies have thought so, and have put on the market a number of these pure vegetable preparations, made from formulas secured after patient searching into the annals of the past, so that those who want them neel to be without them.

TREATING THE WRONG DISEASE.

Many times women call on their family physicians, suffering, as they imagine, one from dyspepsia, another from heart disease, another from nervous exhaustion or prostration, another with pain here or there, and in this way they all present alike to themselves and their easy-going and indifferent, or over-busy doctor, separate and distinct diseases, for which he prescribes his pills and potions, assuming them to be such, when, in reality, they are all only symptoms caused by some womb disorder. The physician, ignorant of the cause of suffering, encourages his practice until large bills are made. The suffering patient gets no better, but probably worse by reason of the delay, wrong treatment and consequent complications. A proper medicine, like Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, directed to the cause would have entirely removed the disease, thereby dispelling all those distressing symptoms, and instituting comfort instead of prolonged misery.

3 PHYSICIANS FAILED.

Mrs. E. F. Morgan, of No. 71 Lexington St., East Boston, Mass., anys: "Five years ago I was a dreadful sufferer from uterine troubles. Having exhausted the skill of three phy-sicians, I was completely discouraged, and so weak I could with difficulty cross the room weak I could with difficulty cross the room alons. I began taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and using the local treatment recommended in his 'Common Sense Medical Advisor.' I commenced to improve at once. In three months I was perfectly cared, and have had no trouble since. I wrote a letter to my family paper, briefly mentioning how my beatth had been restored, and offering to send the full particulars to any one writing me for thom, and enclosing a stampedenselope for reply. I have received over four hundred letters. In reply, I have described my case and the treatment used, and have carnestly advised them to 'do likewise.' From a great many I have received second letters of thanks, stating that they had commenced the use of 'Favorite Prescription,' had sent the $1.50 required for the 'Medical Adviser,' and had applied the local treatment so fully and plainly laid down therein, and were much botter already."

JEALOUS

Of Crystal, Mich., writes: "I was troubled with female weakness, leucorrhea and falling of the womb for seven years, so I had to keep my bed for a good part of the time. I doctored with an army of different physicians, and spent large sums of money, but received no lasting benefit. At last my husband persuaded me to try your medicines, which I was loath to do, because I was projudiced against sthem, and the doctors asid they would do me no good. I finally told my husband that if he would get me some of your medicines, I would try them against the advice of my physician. He got me six bottles of the "Favorite Prescription," also six bottles of the "Discovery" and four of Favorite Prescription, also six bottles of Discovery and four of "Favorite Prescription," and I have been a sound woman for four years. I then gave the balance of the medicine to my sister, who was troubled in the same way, and she cured herself in a short time. I have not had to take any medicine now for almost four years."
