

FOR PRESIDENT,
W. S. HANCOCK,
Of Pennsylvania.

ROOMS DEMOCRATIC-CONSERVATIVE PARISH
Central Executive Committee.
Baton Rouge, June 3, 1890.

The members of the above Committee are hereby notified to attend a meeting, at their Rooms, in the city of Baton Rouge, on THURSDAY, the 24th day of June, 1890, at 10 o'clock A. M. A punctual attendance is requested.

By order of
M. CHAMBERS, President.
W. G. RANDOLPH, Secretary.

THE SILVER LINING AT LAST.

The defeat of U. S. Grant at Chicago, will mark one of the greatest events in the history of the United States. Many, at first glance, will only see that one candidate instead of another has been chosen.

Close scrutiny will reveal a far greater significance.

During a period of twenty years the demon of hate and discord has stalked through every nook and corner of this country, robbing men of their reason and those virtues which alone can give to a people a government such as it should emanate through that voice, which, coming from the masses, is justly said to be that of the God on High.

The earth, impregnated with the blood shed by one brother from another, has since 1861, thirsted for more, and the voice of humanity crying aloud for a cessation of the unnatural combat has gone on unheeded as long as the worst passions have controlled the American people, causing them to follow, in their madness, the soulless drivers of the Juggernaut car.

It was for this, that Grant was the idol of the hour. Was he not greater, because he had shown himself totally insensible to appalling loss of lives. It was he alone "who would fight it out on that line, if it took all summer to do it." And at the Wilderness, Spettsylvania, Cold Harbor and Petersburg, he drove his countrymen to the slaughter, with an unconcern that would have done credit to the most blood thirsty of London's hangmen.

Great indeed, as a scourge upon the human family has the taciturn extant proven himself to be.

Has he exhibited any other virtue? None that we know of.

He has on the contrary, shown himself devoid of those instincts which characterize the Christian soldier and statesman. We will scarcely do him the credit of conceding that in hounding the South during eight long years, he was animated by the frenzy of the hour: Hate.

Base selfishness controlled his every action. He sustained men without consciences, that chaos might remain the normal condition of the country, so that the unblinking banner might know that without such a chief, his golden opportunity would soon be numbered among the things that were.

There were none but Grant, who would violate all the precedents established by the Chief Magistrates who had preceded him. He alone had dared to receive presents with both hands, and to distribute the patronage of the government among his relations and his retinue of personal henchmen—it mattered little whether they were the Longstreets, the Mosbys, the Belknapes, or the carpet-bag locusts whom he quartered upon the Southern country.

During the interregnum created by Hayes' occupancy of the Presidential chair, the Freebooters, in many instances, like lean and hungry dogs were compelled to gnaw at the manger itself.

Peace unfortunately for them was re-established. With the departure of the Sheridans and the Dog Merrills, the rioting between the whites and the blacks of the South came to an abrupt termination. But instead, industry and thrift re-appeared. The finances of the nation were suddenly placed on a stable basis and at last, with returning prosperity, reason began to resume its sway.

Like so many Othellos, the occupation of the political gamblers was rapidly being removed. Thus it was that a huge boom was inaugurated looking to the re-elevation of the Great Grand Master of all the Rings. Superior in their eyes, to Washington himself, they rallied to nominate him to a third term, looking to his installation as the ruler of a "Strong Centralized Government."

The Conklings, the Logans, the Camerons and the others, mustered the THREE HUNDRED SPARTANS, who at Chicago, "fought it out on that line" through thirty-six ballots, when at last, the confounded luck changed, and the Republic triumphed over the "Strong Government" conspiracy.

No wonder that the nominations of Garfield and Arthur, have sown dismay among the faithful.

The days of Returning Boards are over and in November next, just as it used to be when this was "the best government that the world ever saw" the majority of the ballots cast will tell who is to be the next President.

To declare Mr. Hayes the duly elected by ONE VOTE, it became necessary to throw out Louisiana, South Carolina and Florida from the count.

This method is not to be repeated next year. So that, in the event the Democratic party holds its own in the States which gave a majority to Tilden in 1876, it takes no prophet to predict that the Union, the Constitution and the right of local self-government will again forevermore be reaffirmed by the triumphant election of the Democratic nominees.

To win the fight Garfield and Arthur must carry some of the States that went for Tilden, while they must retain all those carried by Hayes.

Such is the situation. Let the Cincinnati Convention nominate a good ticket, and almost any man can say now, which is the winning side.

THE DEMOCRAT'S ENTERPRISE.

If we do have a crow to pick with the New Orleans Democrat now and then, still we will not deny it the credit it deserves, whenever it takes a step in the direction of aiding the development of the wonderful resources of our State, or in any other way, promoting the public welfare. The paragraph which will be found below, will explain why it is, that in this instance, we do not hesitate to applaud our pugnacious contemporary and ask of the people of the Florida parishes, that they furnish Col. Skipwith all the information he may seek, as well as to extend him all the courtesies which his mission entitle him to receive at their hands:

The enterprise to which reference has been several times made in these columns, and for the successful prosecution of which we have been for some time making preparations, will be inaugurated to-day. An agent of the Democrat sets this afternoon upon a tour embracing the parishes of St. Tammany, Washington, Tangipahoa, Livingston, St. Helena, East and West Baton Rouge, East and West Feliciana, Pointe Coupee, St. Landry and Avoyelles, for the purpose of compiling a full, comprehensive and attractive statement of their resources, social and material conditions, history and geographical features. The gentleman whom the Democrat has been so fortunate as to engage in this undertaking is a widely-known and prominent citizen of the district, a distinguished lawyer, and perhaps more thoroughly acquainted with the people than any other individual who could have been found. We refer to Col. Henry Skipwith, of East Feliciana. Going, as he does among friends and neighbors, he does not need an introduction, nor called upon to invoke in his behalf a welcome and a co-operation, which he can always command upon his personal merits. Yet we may add that we hope the people and the authorities of the parishes will realize the importance and value to themselves of the enterprise which the Democrat has undertaken, and that they will give their heartiest assistance in the work. It is our purpose to extend this effort throughout the whole State, and to give to the world a full, elaborate and detailed presentation of the advantages which Louisiana offers to immigration and to capital. It is a work which should have been done long ago, and which the Democrat is determined shall not be left undone a moment longer is required to realize our plans. We feel greatly encouraged at having been able to enlist at the outset so powerful a coadjutor as Col. Skipwith, and it is with unfeigned gratification and hope that we chronicle the formal launching of the Democrat's enterprise.—N. O. Democrat.

All Over the Globe.

The 'Nashua Telegraph,' New Hampshire, thus states it: 'Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure, with other of Warner's Safe Remedies, but lately introduced to the public, have in less than a year found their way to every nation on the face of the globe.'

Acting Governor McEnery has caused notices to issue to the newly appointed members of the Board of Supervisors of the Louisiana University and Agricultural and Mechanical College, urging their attendance at the regular meeting to be held in this city, June 26th. Important business he says, is to be transacted.

It was a sickly salute that Grant's colored friends fired over his defeat, on Tuesday last.

ROUGH ON BEATTIE.

Few people in Louisiana will sympathize with Taylor Beattie, in his quarrels with his republican associates in Chicago, where he was confronted in an insolent and defiant manner by Dumont, the notorious colored politician, who almost squared himself in telling him that they stood on even ground, north of the Ohio, intimating that he, Beattie, might help himself, if he chose to do so. To cap the climax, Ludeling the reprobate, the ex-Chief Justice of Radical Supreme Court fame did not feel so debased but that he could, also, treat with contempt the Lafourche Chameleon!

Denied a seat as a Grant delegate in the Convention, the haughty ex-Confederate and radical candidate for Governor, submitted to these affronts lest he might lose the support of these worthies in his unscrupulous pursuit of political elevation and lucre. He laid aside for that, the recollections of those days when he felt himself a loyal and proud son of Louisiana.

He can now say how bitter is the cup that is presented to the lips of men who turn their backs upon their comrades and Country to strike hands with disreputable foes.

Beattie, though, will pass bravely on, as soon as the blush of this fresh humiliation will have fled from his cheek. He is their candidate for Congress in the third district, where he will soon be found asking the devils blue, black and white, to mingle in electing him their fit representative.

Let the good people of the third district bear these incidents in mind, while they administer to him, in the approaching canvass, the only chastisement that he is likely to feel: the defeat of his unscrupulous aspirations.

GARFIELD NOMINATED.

Our heart is filled with joy as we record the defeat of Ulysses S. Grant. The fiat has gone forth that the American Republic is not to be trodden under the heel of a ruthless soldier.

It came to pass in these United States, that an obscure man from the Western State of Illinois, succeeded, by an inconceivable streak of good luck to rise to the chief command of its armies, when those of the Confederacy had been decimated in gaining victories over his predecessors,—and, through the calculations of his ordinary mind, those remnants of armies were overwhelmed by superior numbers, constantly supplied,—after a campaign of eleven months, when he compelled the surrender of Lee's war worn veterans numbering eleven thousand, by hurling upon them more than one hundred and fifty thousand troops.

For this did the blinded North elevate him to the exalted position of a Lieutenant-General and afterwards, in its frenzy, to the Presidency for two successive terms, during which period he exhibited none of those ennobling characteristics that make some men soar above the rank and file of the human family. His rule was marked by an utter disregard of those rights that form the basis upon which the superstructure of our government has been erected.

With a stoicism that constitutes the only striking trait of his character, he persecuted his vanquished countrymen at the same time that he used his power to advance his personal interests.

Possessing no other virtue than that of giving the spoils to his personal adherents, he drew thereby to his support an element whose instincts were in keeping with his own.

He dared to aspire to the Presidency for a third term against the patriotic example shown by George Washington.

Laying aside all semblance of modesty, he appeared at Chicago with a retinue of over three hundred henchmen, who, with the tenacity of despair, clung to his waning fortunes and theirs through thirty-five ballots, in utter disregard of the claims of men of his party, who had elevated him to the highest positions in the land.

Thank God, that even in the Republican ranks, enough virtue and patriotism remained to defeat the conspiracy to overthrow our republican institutions.

The opposition fought him to the last extremity with the same stubbornness which animated his partisans. At the last moment Garfield of Ohio, somebody, united the delegates opposed to Grantism and in the 36th ballot 399 votes were given to Garfield to nominate him as the candidate of the Republican party for the Presidency.

In the nomination of Garfield we recognize the triumph of the Republic over the attempt to establish a Dictatorship.

We entertain no fear of the result in November next. We feel that the next President will be named at Cincinnati by the convention of that party which looks to the constitution as the eternal guide whereby this glorious country is to be governed.

Garfield having received the requisite number of votes—399—he was declared the nominee. Hayes, Hartranft and Conkling were put in the field, but they received only one vote each in scattering ballots. There was only one ballot

FOR VICE-PRESIDENT, which resulted in the selection of Arthur, of New York, as follows:

Arthur, 468; Washburne, 198; Maynard, 30; Jewell, 44; Bruce, colored, 8; Woodford, 1; Davis, 1.

AFTER HIM WITH A SHARP STICK. The West Feliciana Sentinel says that a Mr. W. H. Henderson, residing near Fort Arbuckle, Chickasaw Nation, Indian Territory, left home on the 19th of March last, and rode during 75 days through Texas, Arkansas, Mississippi and Louisiana in pursuit of a thief by the name of John Walker who had stolen two horses from his stable. He captured Walker on the Hamilton place, near Smithland, where he found him in possession of one of the horses, the other having been sold by him at Shreveport for $20. Mr. Henderson estimates the value of the animals at $500, each. He proposes to return home with the thief though he entertains serious doubts of bringing him there safely, owing to the hard feelings entertained in that region toward those who lay unlawful hands on horse flesh.

GARFIELD AND ARTHUR, are two names that fell like a wet blanket upon the average republican politician and aspirant. The "old man," as they term Grant, was the alms-giver of their dreams. They entertained the belief that all that he needed was to obtain the nomination; he would then elbow himself into the Presidency, if he had to sacrifice five hundred thousand darkies and overturn a dozen State governments to accomplish it.

Bright visions of the halcyon days of Carpet Bag rule, when boot-blacks were Senators and barbers Lieutenant Governors, clustered around the name of the tenacious Ulysses. Alas, even Northern radicals couldn't afford to give their favorite a life tenure. A few rounds were fired from a mule-back howitzer, without eliciting the hurrahs of old. It was evident that the faithful felt that instead of candidates "on horseback," Garfield and Arthur as pedestrians would be called upon to breast the Democratic Wave that, since 1876, is coming to overwhelm the dark cohorts of radicalism.

The Alexandria Democrat sends a home thrust at one of its Representatives in the late lamented Legislature. We are glad to see Rapides call to account those whose actions are condemned by the masses of the Democratic party, who demand more than ever an honest and straightforward administration of public affairs. Men whose records can stand investigation do not fear to rise and explain when called upon to do so. Says the Democrat:

"Now, we come to the home part of these charges, which rap loudly at the door of Mr. Hathaway, and tell him plainly and candidly he must clear his skirts of their criminality; and another which has been made against him by the entire body of his constituents, and more especially his immediate neighbors of old Democratic Hineston want him to rise and explain. That charge is that he voted with the "wicked combination" against the General Lottery Bill, which was misrepresenting them and in direct opposition to the Hon. R. L. Luckett, our Senator, and the Hon. James C. Wise, his colleague and our Representative, who truly represented the Democrats and Conservatives of Rapides who nominated and elected them."
