

MRS. GARFIELD.

A Woman who Loves Her Husband and Her Home.

Guiteau's dastardly and nearly fatal attack upon Mr. Garfield has served not only to bring the President nearer than ever to the hearts of the people, but to show in strong relief the beautiful character of his noble wife.

"Much of the time that other women give to distributing visiting cards, in the frantic effort to make themselves leaders of society, Mrs. Garfield spends in the alcoves of the congressional library, searching out books to carry home to study while she nurses the children.

Gen. Garfield is credited in one of his biographies with the following words of praise for her usually sound discretion: "I have been wonderfully blessed in the discretion of my wife. She is one of the coolest and best balanced women I ever saw.

She has borne her husband six children, one of whom, a daughter, died in infancy. One of the most touching incidents in the life of the stricken President was his coming home from the front soon after he had donned the star of a major general to bury a dead son.

great man, and when, if ever in this life, he needs the full strength and support of his noble helpmate. It was most touching and proper that they should have been left alone at their first meeting after the catastrophe.

BURDETTE'S ADVICE TO YOUNG MEN.

Remember, my son, that the world is older than you are, by several years; that for thousands of years it has been so full of smarter and better young men than yourself, that their feet stuck out of the dormer windows;

Be as smart as you can, of course. Know as much as you can, without blowing the packing out of your cylinder-heads; shed the light of your wisdom abroad in the world, but don't dazzle people with it, and don't imagine a thing is simple because you say it is.

Young men are useful, and they are ornamental, and we all love them, and we couldn't engineer a picnic successfully without them. But they are no novelties, my son. Oh, no, nothing of the kind. They have been here before. Do not be so modest as to shut yourself clear out; but don't be so fresh that you will have to be put away to keep from spoiling.

THE SECRET OF GENIUS.

"They talk," said Tom Marshall to an intimate friend, "of my astonishing bursts of eloquence, and doubtless imagine it is my genius bubbling over. It is nothing of the sort. I'll tell you how I do it. I select a subject, and study it from the ground up.

A story is told of a Boston business man who recently tried to umpire a game of base ball between two nines made up of his employes, and before the fourth inning he had discharged every one of the players from his employ, cut down the wages of the scorers and been thrown over a fence by the excited men.
