The Christian Dignity of Labor. If there were any disposition among people in general to deny that labor is honorable, it would be unlikely to manifest itself conspicuously in such days as these. For labor, whatever may have been its timidity in the past, now is holding up its head boldly, and is claiming its full share of respect and honor. Its time of diffidence passed long ago and forever, and probably every wise man rejoices thereat. The Christian dignity of labor, however, is not insisted upon so earnestly, or even understood so generally. Honest faithful work, it ought to be remembered, is noble, not only because of its inherent merit, but because it is inevitably necessary to the fulfillment of the divine plans for the world. God has indorsed and also commanded it. He has made it necessary to most people. In a certain real sense, and without irreverence, it even may be declared that he works himself, continually sustaining all the manifold members of His great universe in all their varied and countless movements and operations. Our sense of the dignity of labor needs to be broad and enlightened. How often are men who work with their hands overheard to sneer at others, who seem idlers, yet who may be intellectual toilers of the first rank? "The pen is mightier than the sword" not only, but also than the spade or the trowel. Much of the most difficult and widely beneficial labor DIVORCES. Speedily; quietly. What Bell and Edison are to the telephone and electricity, says the Pittsburg News, Dr. Franklin Miles, the well-know specialist in nervous diseases, is to the nervous system and nerve fluid. Among his numerous discoveries his Restorative Nervine is undoubtedly one of the greatest. It is unsurpassed in nervousness, dyspepsia, headache, epilepsy, neuralgia, backache, melancholly, sleeplessness, change of life, etc. Free trial footies of it may be had of the City Drug store, and also Dr. Miles' new book on "New and Startling Facts" for the afflicted.
