The "Register" is in receipt of a cheering letter and clippings from that successful farmer and prince of good fellows, W. O. Hollar, of Williston, North Dakota, a native, and former resident of Franklin county. Mr. Hollar speaks optimistically of Williston, its rapid development in recent years and the wonderful possibilities of his part of the Northwest, for the sturdy easterner and westerner. He says "we have been having a fine winter and to quote a visitor to the Pacific coast, where it has been cold 'Western North Dakota is the banana belt of America—had the finest weather during January of any state in the Union.'" Mr. Hollar cites as a practical demonstration of Williston's growth, that very few buildings are standing that were there in 1901, all having been razed and new modern structures erected.—Tipton, Indiana.

Residents of other cities have already signified their intentions of removing to Williston and several purchases of lots in the city have been announced while inquiries are beginning to pour in on dealers in local realty for property in the city on which residences can be erected and for homes already built. This is taken as proof that the prediction of real estate dealers that the coming of warmer weather would see a revival of interest in the local market were warranted. Spring is nearly here. The time has already come when new interest is being manifested in the real estate situation and hopes are high that this month and next will be record months in the buying of homes in our city. What is true of the local market is also true of the market in farm lands. Inquiries are coming fast for lands in Williams county and papers received from over the state indicate that activity is increasing in farm lands in other counties.
